2 ——— Interest in excess of principal—Act XXVIII of 1855.—S. 6 Regulation XV of 1793 (prohibiting the Courts from awarding as interest a sum larger than the principal) is not applicable to a suit instituted after the passing of Act XXVIII of 1855. Even under Regulation XV of 1793 it was the practice of the Court to allow interest in excess of principal where the interest had accumulated owing to reasons not ascribable in any degree to procrastination on the part of the creditor. HUROMONEE GOOPTIA v. GOBIND COOMAR CHOWDHRY 5 W. R. 51

3 ——— Interest in excess of principal.—Regulation XV of 1793 (prohibiting award of interest in excess of principal) applies to sums decreed only and not to interest which has accumulated through the neglect of the judgment-debtor to pay. SHIB CHUNDER GOOPTO v. ALLAD MONEE DOSSIA 5 W. R. Mis. 22

4 ——— Interest in excess of principal.—Where under s. 6 Regulation XV of 1793 interest upon the principal prior to the institution of the suit was adjudged to the plaintiff limited to a sum equal to the principal, although that regulation was repealed when the suit was brought, yet looking to the time when his contract was made the plaintiff was held not entitled to any further interest before suit, but interest upon the principal was allowed to him from the date of suit to the date of decree. JEEBNATH SINGH v. KUREEMUN BIBEE [7 W. R. 172

5 ——— Usurious transaction.—To an action for recovery of arrears of rent due to the plaintiff under a sub-lease of a pergunna the defendant pleaded that the sub-lease was part of a loan transaction for the purpose of securing to the plaintiff an illegal interest upon the loan, and was void under Bengal Regulation XV of 1793. Held by the Privy Council (confirming the decision of the Courts below) that it was an usurious transaction and that the suit should be dismissed. Where settlements or holdings are of very old date and lands are let out by areas ascertained without any accurate survey but as contained within certain recognized boundaries for instance by reference to other holdings it is incumbent upon the zamindar seeking enhancement of rent very many years after the original settlement to show that the lands held by the raiyats are in excess of the lands originally let to them in consequence of some encroachment or some alluvial increment or that the settlement was made on the basis of measurement and the rates of rent as applied to the area then determined, while on a fresh measurement mad by the same length of measure it has been found that he is entitled to receive additional rent which by carelessness or neglect or s me other cause he had hitherto lost A liberal interpretation should be put upon the word permanently in s 38 sub s (1) cl (a) and the word construed with reference to existing conditions. It cannot be said that a deterioration is not permanent only because by the application of capital and skill it might be removed. BHOOTAN DUARS ACT (XVI OF 1869) —concluded in view of the provisions of Act XVI of 1869 and the Repealing Act VII of 1895 On appeal therefrom —Held that the notification extending the Civil Procedure Code to Jalpaiguri had not the effect of introducing the Civil Procedure Code to the Bhutan Duars although the latter are a part of Jalpaiguri inasmuch as Act XVI of 1869 which was then in force in the Bhutan Duars excluded that jurisdiction in express terms But the effect of the repeal of Act XVI (without any qualification) by Bengal Act VII of 1895 has left the Civil Procedure to be administered in the Bhutan Duars That the plaintiffs are not precluded by the entry in the record of rights from obtaining relief against the defendants An entry in a record under Act XVI of 1869 in order to be conclusive evidence of any right interest or other matter must be one which has been honestly and fairly obtained BROJO KANTO DAS v IUFAUN DAS 4 C W N 287 that as the validity of the second marriage depended on the Mahomedan law and as that law does not allow a plurality of husbands it would be void or valid according as the first marriage was or was not subsisting at the time it took place that no notice having been given to D as required by Mahomedan law previous to the second marriage and no recourse having been had to the Courts for the purpose of obtaining a declaration that the former marriage was dissolved and as British India cannot be held to be a foreign country for the purpose of rendering such notice unnecessary the previous marriage was not dissolved under Mahomedan law and the subsequent marriage was therefore void. Held accordingly that the conviction was right IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF RAM KUMARI I. Two days after the goods had been put on board and when the ship was still in dock it sprung a leak and the water came into the hold and damaged the plaintiffs goods. The ship was taken to the dry dock the cargo was shifted and the leak repaired. under the bills of lading either over the ship's side or from lighters or a store ship or custom house or warehouse at merchant's risk. Freight was prepaid in Liverpool. On their arrival at Bombay the two steamers went into the Prince's Dock belonging to the Port Trust and discharged the boilers by means of the Port Trust cranes on to the dock wharves. The plaintiff subsequently sent to remove the boilers but was not allowed by the dock authorities to do so until he had paid to them various sums amounting in the aggregate to R930 on account as stated in the bill furnished him by the Port Trust of "landing charges" for the said boilers. The bills also contained certain additional charges for "wharfage". These the plaintiff was ready to pay but the "landing charges" he paid only under protest and in order to get possession of his goods, and now sought to recover the same from the defendants who represented the ship-owners. It was the practice of the Port Trust to recover these charges in all cases from the consignees of goods discharged in their dock, and the charge was said to be levied on all goods landed on the wharves of the dock whether by the dock's cranes or by the ship's own tackles. The charge was incurred the moment the goods touched the wharf. In their rates sanctioned by Government which by their Act the Port Trust were entitled to charge this charge was called not a "landing charge" but a "dock and cranage" charge. Had the plaintiff been given delivery of these goods in the stream and afterwards himself landed them at any wharf belonging to the Port Trust in the Port of Bombay the Port Trust would have sought to have made the same charge for allowing the goods to be landed whether that was done by their appliances or not. Held that the ship-owner and not the consignee was bound to pay these charges, they being in reality charges for work and labour done in and about the landing of the goods—an operation which under the bills of lading was within the duty of the ship-owner. Per LATHAM J.—The ship having elected to discharge in the dock, it was her duty to land the goods on the wharf. Every charge which had to be incurred before that could be done was a charge antecedent to delivery and one therefore which must be paid by the ship-owner. SCOTT v. FINLAY I. L. R. 7 Bom. 386

V. at Moulmein consigned to the plaintiff at Bombay 135 logs of teak timber shipped on board the defendant's ship. The bill of lading which was signed by the defendant described the logs as marked "A. T." and measuring tons 115 12 10, and it provided for the payment of freight thereon at Bombay at the rate of R17 per ton of 50 cubic feet on right delivery. The last clause of the bill of lading was in the handwriting of the defendant and was as follows:—"Marks number quantity and measurement unknown, all other conditions as per charter party." The charter-party was expressed to be between the owners of the ship and Messrs. B. of Rangoon as charterers of the whole ship, and provided for the payment of freight "at the rate of R18 per ton of 50 cubic feet for all timber one rate throughout except 100 tons broken stowage at half freight by intake measurement." On arrival of the ship at Bombay the plaintiff as consignee of the timber and holder of the bill of lading paid the defendant (the captain of the ship) R1,500 on account of freight and took delivery of the 135 logs. On measuring them he found that, according to his method of measurement, the total measurement of the 135 logs came only to tons 58 27 11 6, and not tons 115-12 10 as mentioned in the bill of lading. He claimed therefore to be chargeable with freight only on the smaller quantity (viz. R995 8) and to recover from the defendant the difference (viz. R504 8) between that sum and R1,500 paid on account as for an overpayment of freight. It was proved that all the timber on board had been measured at Moulmein by an employé of the charterers acting apparently as agent of all the different shippers, and that the measurements in the bills of lading were supplied by this person to the defendant as the measurements of the different consignments. It was also proved that the 135 logs received and measured by the plaintiff in Bombay were the same logs that were shipped under the bill of lading, and that the plaintiff's measurement of them was correct according to the mode of measurement which he adopted. There was no evidence as to what was the mode of measurement followed at Moulmein, nor, except the statements in the bill of lading, as to what was the actual intake measurement of the timber there. Held that the effect of the last clause in the bill of lading was to incorporate into that document the clause of the charter party which provided that freight should be payable on the intake measurement; that the burden of proving what the intake measurement actually was lay upon the plaintiff who sought to recover back money which he alleged he had paid in excess of what was due; and that, in the absence of such evidence on behalf of the plaintiff, the statement of quantity contained in the bill of lading was primâ facie evidence of the intake measurement of the timber. 28 ——————— Short delivery of goods—No evidence as to how goods were lost—

Burden of proof— Or otherwise meaning of—The plaintiff was the consignee of a large consignment of goods shipped from Bombay in bags on board the defendants steamship Java for carriage to Zanzibar On arrival of the Java at Zanzibar the goods were landed by the defendant company and placed in the customs godown where the plaintiff in due course demanded delivery Some of the bags were not forthcoming but the evidence did not show how the loss had occurred The bill of lading contained the following condition — The Company s liability shall cease as soon as the packages are free of the ship s tackle after which they shall not be responsible for any loss or damage however caused If stored in receiving ship godown or upon any wharf all risks of fire dacoity vermin or otherwise shall be with the merchant and the usual charges shall be paid before delivery of the goods Fire insurance will be covered by the company's agents on application In a suit brought by the plaintiff for short delivery of goods —Held that the defendants were liable They did not show how the loss occurred and as it might have occurred from causes not covered by the exception (e g from misdelivery) they did not bring themselves within the protection afforded by the exemption The general words or otherwise contained in the tenth clause of the bill of lading could not be read so as to cover all possible losses for that would make them include wilful misconduct on the part of the defendant s servants and general words are not read with such an extended meaning Nor would they include misdelivery for that was provided for in the eighth clause BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO v RATANSI RAMJI [I L R. 22 Bom. 184

29 ——— Claim for short delivery—Place for preferring claim —A bill of lading contained a provision that any claim for short delivery or for damage done to goods should be made at the port of Calcutta and not elsewhere Held that this clause did not affect the plaintiff's right of suit in the Court at Rangoon and that if the defendants meant to object that no claim had been made in Calcutta before the commencement of the suit they should have done so in proper time viz in their written statement An objection on that ground taken for the first time at the hearing of the appeal was disallowed BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION CO v IBRAHIM MOOSUM 8 W R 35

30 ——— Claim for short delivery to be made at a certain place within a certain time—Reasonable condition—Common carrier Liability of—Carriers Act III of 1865 —A stipulation by persons carrying on extensive business as carriers that they should be apprised of claims made on them for default on the part of their servants at a specified place and no other and within a time which will render enquiry likely to be attended with some result is not unreasonable The defendants were owners of a fleet of steam ships plying periodically along the coast of British India by which they undertook to convey for freight parcels of goods for all persons indifferently from and to specified ports They stipulated in their bills of lading that claims for short delivery should be made at the port

of Calcutta only within one month after delivery, of any portion of the goods entered in the bill of lading Held in a suit against defendants for compensation for value of goods short delivered that this was not an unreasonable stipulation and that a claim made on the agents of the defendants who were authorized only to retain the goods receive freight and give delivery was not a sufficient compliance with the condition Held also that defendants were common carriers though not for the purposes of the Indian Carriers Act and that their character of carriers continued so long as the goods remained in their hands and undelivered. 31 ——— Delivery of goods to consignee—Cargo unclaimed on arrival of ship—Rights of ship owner to land goods—Damages by rain—Madras Harbour Trust Act (Madras Act II of 1886) —The defendant s steamship arrived at Madras on 4th December 1891 bringing bags of gram consigned to the plaintiffs under a bill of lading by which the defendants were to have the option of delivering the goods into a receiving ship or landing them at consignee s risk and expense and their liability was to cease when the goods were free of the ship's tackle The plaintiffs on the date of the arrival of the goods were not authorized to receive them. The plaintiffs set up a custom that cargo of this description ought to be landed on the beach but as this could not be done in the absence of the consignees the defendants landed it the same day on the pier and delivered it into the custody of the Madras Harbour Trust for storage pending delivery to the consignees On the 8th of December 1891 heavy rain fell and on the same date plaintiffs learnt that the cargo had been delivered on the pier When the plaintiffs came to take delivery on that day a considerable portion had been damaged by rain for which they now sued the defendants Held (1) that where the consignees were unable to take delivery in the ordinary way on the beach the master of a ship has the option of landing and warehousing the goods and that delivery to the Harbour Trust for custody was not wrongful (2) that in the absence of proof that the defendants were negligent or that they failed to deliver the goods the suit must be dismissed BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY v IBRAHIM SULAIMAN I. The municipality forbade the work on the ground that it was likely to interfere with the access of light and air to the neighbouring houses The plaintiff thereupon sued the municipality to establish his right to build the proposed structure It was contended for the plaintiff that the municipality ought not to have refused permission in the interests of the neighbouring house-holders who were able to protect their own rights in case of injury Held that the suit would not lie as the order of the municipality refusing permission was not an unreasonable one under the circumstances of the case Held further that the authority of the municipality was not in any way affected by the circumstance that the proposed erection might be an encroachment on private rights subjecting the plaintiff to an action by the persons injured. BOMBAY LOCAL FUNDS ACT (III OF 1869)

1 ———— s 8—Local cess—Landlord and tenant—Fraudulent collection of cess—The plaintiffs sued to recover back from the defendant the amount levied by him as local cess on certain wanta lands belonging to the plaintiffs, the defendant claiming to be the superior holder of the village in which the lands were situated The amount was levied by the defendant through the assistance of the mamlatdar under Bombay Act III of 1869 s 8 The defendant contended that in consequence of a demand from Government he had paid local cess on the whole of his talukh, including the village in which the plaintiffs' lands were situated and was therefore entitled under ss 69 and 70 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) to recover from them the amount which he had paid to Government as a portion of the cess which rateably fell upon their lands It was found that the defendant was not the proprietor of the lands held by the plaintiffs and that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between them; also that defendant paid local cess for the plaintiffs' lands fraudulently and with the intention of thereby making evidence of title to their lands knowing that he had no lawful or just claim to them Held that the defendant was not the superior holder of the lands within s 8 of Bombay Act III of 1869 and was therefore not entitled to the assistance of the revenue officers of Government to recover the cess provided by that section for superior holders as against tenants and occupants although he might have paid the local cess due on the land in the plaintiffs possession; and that consequently the aid of the mamlatdar was illegally and improperly given to the defendant for the recovery of the amount from the plaintiffs Held also that the defendant was not a person

2. ———————— and ss 504 and 527 —Land taken by the municipality for street improvement—Compensation for land taken—Dispute as to amount of compensation—Notice of suit —Limitation —In 1891 the municipal authorities of Bombay gave notice to the plaintiffs under s. 299 of Bombay Act III of 1888 that they required 23 30 square yards of the plaintiff s land for street improvement. On the 14th December 1891 the plaintiff gave possession of the land to the municipality and on 27th January 1892 claimed R60 per square yard as compensation By letter dated 23rd February 189? the Municipal Commissioner (without prejudice) offered R50 per square yard as compensation and stated that on the plaintiff producing the title-deeds and papers to establish his title the necessary documents in connection with the payment would be prepared. Nothing further took place in the matter until the 14th February 1894 on which date the plaintiff wrote a letter to the Municipal Commissioner in which without mentioning any sum he requested the payment of the amount which might be due to him as compensation for his land taken by the municipality The Commissioner refused to pay the compensation contending that the plaintiff s claim was time-barred. The plaintiff thereupon brought this suit claiming R1 165 (being at the rate of R50 per square yard) as compensation for the land taken by the defendant or in the alternative for that sum as damages for the breach of contract to pay purchase money for the land The defendant pleaded (1) that notice under s 527 of the Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) was necessary before suit filed and (2) that the suit was barred by limitation The Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court found for the defendant with costs and dismissed the suit contingent on the opinion of the High Court. On a case stated for the High Court—Held (1) that notice under s 527 of Bombay Act III of 1888 was not necessary that section not being applicable to suits brought to enforce payment of compensation under s 301 of the Act; (2) that the suit was not barred by limitation Per FARRAN J—A suit against the municipality of Bombay for compensation for land acquired by the municipality under s 299 of Bombay Act III of 1888 is not an action of tort or quasi tort but a simple action for the price of land which the terms of s. 301 of the Act impose upon the Commissioner to pay The obligation to pay that price is of the same nature (1) whether the owner assents to the valuation of the land placed upon it by the Commissioner; (2) whether the value is determined by the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court or (3) whether it is left undetermined S 527 does not apply to any of these three cases In all of them the obligation to pay is imposed by s. 301 and does not arise from the manner in which the amount of the price to be paid is arrived at S. 504 prescribes the only mode in which in case of dispute the value

——— s 353—Notice to a house owner to reduce the height of his building given more than three months after its completion— Completion Meaning of —One R was served with a notice under s 353 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) requiring him to reduce the height of a building which he had erected. The building was completed in June 1893 and the notice was issued on 13th January 1894. R was prosecuted for not complying with this notice He contended that the notice was time barred as it had not been given within three months after the completion of the building In answer to this plea it was urged on behalf of the municipality that the building could not be said to have been completed, unless and until such accommodations as privies and cesspools had been executed in accordance with the requirements of the Health Department and that therefore the notice was within time Held that the notice was time barred. The word completion in s 353 of Bombay Act III of 1888 must be taken in its ordinary sense and the Court cannot read into the section in accordance with sanitary regulations or sanitary officers' opinions IN RE RAGHUNATH MAKUND I L R. 19 Bom. 372

——— s. 381—Low ground—Low lying ground—Notice by Municipal Commissioner requiring owner of low lying ground to fill it with sweet earth up to a certain level —Under s. 381 of the Bombay Municipal Act III of 1888 the Municipal Commissioner for the City of Bombay issued a notice to the appellant as owner of certain low lying ground. The notice stated that in the opinion of the Commissioner the ground accumulated water in the monsoon and caused nuisance to the tenants of two chawls situated on the premises The owner was therefore required by the notice to fill in the low lying ground with sweet earth to the level of the road and slope it towards the new drain on the road side As the owner refused to comply with the notice he was convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of R15 by the Presidency Magistrate under s. 471 of the Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) Held reversing the conviction and sentence that the notice was illegal The words used in s 381 are low ground' which is not the same as low lying ground. And though the section gives power to the Commissioner to require the owner of low ground to cleanse and fill up the same it does not permit him to issue an order that an indefinite extent of low lying ground shall be filled up much less that it shall be filled up to some particular level or filled up with sweet earth or that it shall be sloped in a particular direction MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONER OF BOMBAY v HARI DWARKOJI I. ——— s 472—Continuing offences—Punishment for such offences after a fresh conviction—Separate prosecution for continuing the offence —A Presidency Magistrate having convicted certain accused persons and fined them under s 471 of the City of Bombay Municipal Act (Bombay Act III of 1888) proceeded in the same order purporting to act under the provisions of s 472 to fine them so much per day in case they continued the offence Held that the latter order was illegal under s 472 of the Act The section requires a separate prosecution for a distinct offence a prosecution in which a charge must be laid for a specific contravention for a specific number of days and for which charge if proved the Magistrate is to impose a daily fine of an amount which is left to his discretion to determine IN RE LIMBAJI TULSIRAM I. ——— s 527—Suit for damages against Municipal Commissioner—Notice of suit—What is sufficient notice —The plaintiffs were owners of a house consisting of a ground floor and upper story and measuring 77 feet in length On the south side of the house was a gully 3 feet 6 inches wide separating it from another upper storied house The plaintiffs in this suit complained that in January 1891 the defendant by his servants dug a trench 8 feet deep along the whole length of the gully for the purpose of laying a drain pipe and that the work was done so negligently that the plaintiffs' house was injured and became in such a dangerous condition that it had to be pulled down The plaintiffs claimed R3 996 as damages The defendant denied the negligence and alleged that the work was not done by his servants or agents but by a contractor For the defendant it was contended that the notice of action given by the plaintiffs under s. 527 of the Bombay Municipal Act (III of 1888) was insufficient The notice stated that one S L a contractor under you and as such being your agent and servant excavated a trench etc It was argued that this was not a good notice as it only alleged a

3 ———— Service inam land—Suit for a declaration of title to trees thereon and for damages—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Hereditary Offices Act (Bombay Act III of 1874)—Hereditary officer—Officiator—The plaintiff complained that he was prevented from cutting the trees growing on land situate in the village of Tungarli belonging to certain persons who had sold the trees to him. He claimed damages and an injunction restraining the Collector from interfering with him The defendant pleaded that the trees did not belong to the plaintiff's vendors being on service inam land. The lower Court dismissed the plaintiff's claim holding that the land on which the trees were growing was service inam land and that the plaintiff s vendors had no title to them On appeal the High Court on the evidence upheld the lower Court s decision that the land was inam service land but held that it did not necessarily follow that the trees upon it were the property of Government and not of the vatandars The latter might be the owners of the trees subject to a condition The case was therefore remanded to the District Court for a finding on an issue as to whether the holders of service inam lands had a title to the trees on the lands, and if so whether they had the right to cut down trees without the permission of the Collector On this finding the District Judge found in the affirmative The case then came again before the High Court when a preliminary objection was taken that under s. 4 of Act X of 1876 the Court had no jurisdiction Held that it having been decided that land in question was service inam land the Court under s. 4, cl (a) of Bombay Act X of 1876 ceased to have jurisdiction over the plaintiff s claim against Government in respect of the trees growing thereon as such claims related to property appertaining to the office of a village officer DESOUZA DEVINO v SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA I. The defendants pleaded the law of limitation The suit was brought more than three years after the first default in payment of an instalment had been made but within three years from the time when taking into account the payments that had been made the first instalment claimed became due Held that these payments as regards both parties must be considered as if made at the time fixed; that the defendants could not rely upon the stipulation as making the whole debt due and fixing the period from which the time of limitation ran and that the first of the instalments claimed having become due within three years the suit was not barred RAM KRISHNA MAHADEV v BAYAJI BIN SANTAJI

No instalment was paid and when the suit was brought defendant pleaded that the suit was barred as three years had elapsed from the date on which the last instalment became due Held that the usual clause that on failure to pay one instalment the whole amount shall be payable on demand gave a mere election to plaintiff of converting the obligation into a different one that that election was never exercised and that the document continued to be one securing the payment of a debt by instalments as to all of which the action had long been barred; and that it was unnecessary therefore to consider whether in the present case, on demand must not be construed according to its meaning at the period at which the words were written EATHAMAKALA SUBBAMMAH v RAGHIAH 7 Mad., 293

The zamindar thereupon sued to set aside the survey and for a declaration that the northern boundary lay many miles further north and that the intermediate hill country belonged to him as forming part of pergunnah Shoosung Held (by SETON KARR J) that the acts of possession proved by the zamindar were sufficient under the circumstances to prove his proprietary right in the disputed tract and for the passing of a decree in his favour Held (by MACPHERSON J) that they were not sufficient to entitle him to a decree being acts of mere easement independent of possession Held by PEACOCK C J JACKSON and PHEAR JJ on appeal under the Letters Patent —The rules laid down by Regulation X of 1822 were intended to take effect only within the tract of country described in s 2 within which the administration of civil and criminal justice etc was by s 3 declared to be vested in an officer to be denominated the Civil Commissioner of the north eastern parts of Rungpore The proviso in s 8 was not intended to give substantive powers to the Governor General in Council in respect of other tracts of the country and cl 2 of the same section did not intend to take away the power of any Civil Court except within that tract The proviso contained in s 8 does not authorize Government to separate any part of the Garrow country beyond that described in s 2 from the district and from the general Regulations but merely directs the separation of such tracts from the estates of the neighbouring zamindars and the discontinuance of the collection of cesses by the zamindars from the Garrows By cl 2 s 8 the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is taken away only in respect of acts of the above description done under the authority of the Government but that does not take away the right of a zamindar to contest a survey award drawing a line which deprives him of part of his zamindari and his permanently settled estate Where a Rajah had exercised rights and collected dues on certain hills and in forests north of an alleged line and it was the unanimous opinion of all the revenue authorities that the forests were within his permanently settled estate the assumption by them and Government of such line as the boundary of the Rajah s estate throwing upon him the onus of proving his claim to any portion north of that line was held to be arbitrary and anomalous If such proceedings were adopted under cl 12 s 5 Regulation IX of 1825 they were wholly irregular and the irregularity can be no ground for excluding the Court from examining them When a man is found exercising on both sides of a boundary line without objection rights of ownership or incorporeal rights, and when it is not shown that there is any other owner of the soil or that any objection to the exercise of such rights was made during a long course of years his acts cannot be treated as the encroachments of a wrong doer Per PHEAR J —Where acts of user illustrate all the modes of enjoyment of which a disputed property can reasonably be expected to be capable it can be rightly attributed to proprietorship of the tract upon which they were exercised. The purchasers were however unable to pay the R10 000 earnest money and they handed to the defendants three Bank of Bombay shares as security for the performance of the contract One of the purchasers shortly afterwards died the defendants apparently abandoned the idea of enforcing the contract, and at the end of the year they returned to the purchaser's family two of the Bank of Bombay shares having (as they alleged) sold the third to defray the expenses which they had incurred in connection with the transaction The plaintiff sued to recover R1 00 as brokerage from the defendants. Held that under the circumstances the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the R1 00 but only to a quantum meruit there being no previous agreement as to the time when the brokerage was to be paid; and that he was only entitled to a percentage (5 per cent.) on the value of the shares which had been actually received by the defendants Part of the business for which the plaintiff was employed was to find a solvent purchaser STOKES v SOONDERNATH KHOTE ——— Party wall Liability for cost of—Agreement to refer disputes to a third person—Effect of such agreement on the right to sue—Award of such third person essential to right of action—Surveyor's certificate—Limitation—Covenant—Right to sue—Stranger to consideration—Landlord and tenant —The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant half the cost of a party wall The plaintiff and defendants were lessees of adjoining pieces of land under agreements made between them respectively and the Secretary of State for India in Council as lessor The terms and conditions of the two agreements were the same By these agreements the plaintiff and defendant respectively agreed to build houses upon the said pieces of land in the manner therein specified, and the agreements contained the two following clauses —(1) " The buildings to be continuous with party walls common to both adjoining houses (2) All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor whose decision shall be binding on both parties In pursuance of the said agreements the plaintiff and defendants respectively erected buildings on the said pieces of land. The plaintiff caused the northern wall of his building to be built as a party wall and it was used by the defendants as the southern wall of the building erected by them The defendants paid the builder who was employed by the plaintiff a sum of R700 on account of the cost of erecting the party wall but the rest of the cost was defrayed by the plaintiff The party wall was completed in November 1871 but in consequence of disputes which arose between the plaintiff and the building contractor the sum payable to the latter was not ascertained for some years. In March 18 9 the plaintiff caused the party wall to be measured by a surveyor and on the th June 1879 demanded from the defendants payment of half the cost The defendants however failing to pay the sum demanded the plaintiff after notice to the defendants caused the cost of the said party wall to be ascertained by the Government surveyor who by a certificate dated the 2 th February 188_ certified that the share of the cost to be borne by the defendants for the said party wall was R 22 The plaintiff in this action sought to recover this sum from the defendants minus the R700 which as above stated the defendants had already paid and for which the plaintiff gave them credit The defendants in their written statement alleged that the party wall had been partly built with materials supplied by them and that in the year 18 0 they had adjusted accounts with the plaintiff in respect of the said materials and the said party wall and it was then agreed that the sum of R CO paid by the defendants should be treated as a final settlement They also alleged that the plaintiff had settled disputes with the building contractors and had only paid them three annas in the rupee on the amount of their claim in full satisfaction the defendants pleaded that they ought not to be charged with more than their due proportion of such reduced amount It was further contended for the defendants that their obligation to pay half the cost of the party wall existed independently of the arrangement between them and the plaintiff to refer the matter to the Government surveyor that this latter covenant was only collateral and did not interfere with the plaintiff's right to sue the defendants for their half share of the cost that the plaintiff s cause of action in this respect arose on the 1 th October 18 8 when the contractor's claim was finally settled and that this suit not having been brought for more than three years after that date it was barred by limitation Held that the suit was not barred There was no right of action independently of the valuation and award of the Government surveyor There was no separate covenant to pay compensation to which the covenant for reference to the Government surveyor could be collateral The rights of the parties were defined by the contracts and under these each lessee might have the benefit of a party wall on such terms and no others as he on his part submitted to Payment of a share of the cost was not one of these terms except in so far as each lessee if a dispute arose was bound by the decision of a Government surveyor That decision was not ancillary serving to give greater explicitness to a right already fully subsisting It was essential to the right itself and until it was made no cause of action for the moiety of the cost arose Where in leases granted by one lessor to several lessees taking sites for buildings intended to be contiguous and to form one block or group in mutual relation there is a common covenant which is an inducement to the lessee to take the lease and which he must know is equally an inducement to his neighbour to take his lease neither can be called a stranger to the consideration Each may be regarded as an equitable assignee of the covenants which the lessor made for his benefit as lessee Each consequently has an equitable right to enforce against the other the obligation stipulated for in his interest and serving as a part of his inducement (as the other knew) to the contract. defendant in the place of Khatav Luddha Both the defendants pleaded limitation and denied their liability to pay any part of the cost of that part of the wall which they did not use The first defendant further alleged that he had paid the whole cost of the foundation and other parts of the said wall and claimed to set off this payment against the claim of the plaintiff. At the original hearing SCOTT J held (1) that the part of the wall in dispute although not used by the defendants was a party wall having regard to the terms of the agreement under which the said wall was erected (2) that Kesserbai was liable equally with the first defendant to pay for this part of the wall having purchased the property subject to the terms of the original agreement of which she presumably had notice (3) that the suit was not barred but that there was no right of action for the cost of the party wall independently of the award of the Government surveyor in whose decision lay all disputes as to such cost and that until his decision was given there was no complete cause of action SCOTT J accordingly on 11th December 1882 decreed that the defendants were severally liable to pay the half of whatever sum the Government surveyor might certify to be due for the cost of the disputed part of the said wall and that the defendants were entitled to set off in the calculation of what was due from them the cost of any work or materials which the Government surveyor might find had been contributed by the first defendant The case was thereupon adjourned in order that the certificate of the Government surveyor might be obtained. The Government surveyor subsequently gave his certificate as to the cost of the unused portion of the said wall but stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundations etc of the wall The case came on again before SCOTT J who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government surveyor Witnesses were accordingly examined and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant s claim of set-off and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall The defendants appealed Held that having regard to the terms of the agreements under which the plaintiff and defendants respectively held their property the Court was not competent to determine the question of the defendant s set off or the other points raised by the pleadings These were matters to be decided by the Government surveyor whose certificate was a condition precedent to the plaintiff s right to sue and upon which the Court might give judgment Held also that the plaintiff was not entitled to use the portion of the wall not occupied by the defendants in any way except as a party wall It was erected under the agreement as a party wall and that it should be used for a purpose inconsistent with the idea of its being a party wall would be opposed to the true intention of the parties to the agreement whether Government or the lessees. The plaintiff was not entitled to the full right of ownership over it as if it had been built on his own ground: the declaration and injunction asked for therefore were refused. might have been authorized to be erected. The land was subsequently resumed by the civil authorities, and the land being within municipal limits the ground rents on it were assigned to the municipality The Municipal Committee having demanded ground rent in respect of the buildings erected on such land under such grant from the representative in title of the original grantee and the latter having refused to pay the same or to vacate the land the Secretary of State for India in Council sued him in the Civil Court for a declaration of proprietary right to the land for its assessment to ground rent and in the event of the refusal of the defendant to pay such rent when fixed for his ejectment therefrom and for mesne profits of the land for six years The cause of action was stated in the plaint to be the refusal of the defendant to pay ground rent or to accept a lease or to surrender the land after a notice to that effect had been issued to him by the Municipal Committee as the plaintiff s agents. Held that the Municipal Committee were the plaintiff's duly authorized agents to lease and obtain rent for the land occupied by the defendant s buildings with their compounds that such notice was properly issued in that character on behalf of the plaintiff; and that the defendant s subsequent refusal to pay rent or to accept a lease or evacuate the premises amounted to a sufficient denial of the plaintiff's title to afford him a good cause of action that assuming that no agreement to pay rent existed the plaintiff was entitled to demand and recover reasonable compensation for the use and occupation of the land by the defendant that the suit was maintainable in the Civil Court and it had power to grant the plaintiff the reliefs sought; that by the conditions of the grant by the military authorities the plaintiff was not disqualified from demanding ground rent for the land before he had paid the defendant the value of the buildings but that looking to those conditions it would not be fair or equitable to grant the plaintiff a decree pure and simple for the ejectment of the defendant but he should be put under the condition that if in case of the defendant s refusal to pay the rent fixed he desired to eject him the value of the buildings as cantonment residences must first be determined and when determined must be tendered to the defendant and if the latter refused to accept it the plaintiff would then be entitled to eject him. Neither by the custom of the port of Bombay nor by the provisions of the Customs Act is the master of a ship bound to wait fifteen days before commencing to land his cargo but within a reasonable time after the arrival of his ship—48 hours in the case of a sailing vessel, and somewhat less in the case of a steamer—he is at liberty to land goods if the consignee has not sent boats for them; and such landing is not unlawful nor a breach of contract as carrier on the part of the master The landing of the goods under the above circumstances and setting them apart for the consignee do not constitute a delivery of them to the consignee; but such goods after being so landed continue in the possession of the master as carrier Course of legislation with reference to the landing of goods on the custom house wharf reviewed. Quære—Whether under the special circumstances of this case the goods when so landed remained in the custody of the master in his capacity of common carrier or as a warehouseman? Act (XIII of 1856) did not give jurisdiction to the High Court when a case was brought before it on certiorari to enquire whether the Magistrate had come to a correct conclusion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner The object of that section was to limit the objections to a conviction to some substantial meritorious ground such as want of jurisdiction or the like and to prevent a conviction from being quashed on a mere error of form or of procedure But the section did not give the High Court any right to interfere on the ground that the Magistrate had come to a wrong conclusion on the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused person Though affidavits may be used to show a want of jurisdiction in a Magistrate even though such affidavits contradict for this purpose the finding of the Magistrate they cannot be used as affording materials for reviewing the Magistrate s decision on the merits REG v NATHOBAL PITAMBAR 10 Bom, 102

there during the life of the widow defendant for the benefit of the reversionary heirs and in order to prevent waste Held by PHEAR J the suit being one to prevent contemplated waste was not barred by lapse of time The agreement of 4th April 1859 was void as being without definite consideration and being in the nature of a gambling transaction not valid against heirs under Hindu law and it was also void being of a champertous nature and contrary to public policy The law which forbids and avoids all acts contrary to public policy and subversive of the general interests of society is in force in this country Independent of the Charter there is a power inherent in any Court of Justice which receives its authority from the State to make the interests of private persons subordinate to those of the public and to take care that where they are in conflict the latter should prevail Held on appeal by PEACOCK C J and MACPHERSON J that the suit could be maintained for the relief sought and for the protection of the property that the deed of the 4th April 1859 so far as it related to the moiety of the property assigned to the defendant G absolutely was not binding on the plaintiffs or on the persons who upon the death of the widow might succeed to the property of her deceased husband Though not void on the ground of champerty it was an unconscionable bargain and a speculative if not a gambling contract, and there was no necessity for such an alienation by the widow But so far as regards the assignment of the moiety as security for the advances and expenses which G or his assigns might reasonably and properly make or incur for the maintenance of the widow for carrying on the necessary proceedings to enforce her rights with 12 per cent interest on such advances, it was not void but created a charge upon that moiety, which was binding upon the reversionary heirs of the husband to the extent of such advances and expenses There was legal necessity for such charge and it affected the moiety both of principal and accumulations Held by MACPHERSON J the agreement of April 1859 was void by English law as being a mere gambling transaction and contrary to public policy and illegal GROSE v AMIRTAMAYI DASSEE

In the same case —Held on appeal to the Privy Council the English laws of maintenance and champerty are not of force as specific laws in India either in the mofussil or in the presidency towns The ground on which contracts of the nature of champerty and maintenance should be held by the Indian Courts to be invalid is that they are contrary to public policy An agreement to supply funds to carry on a suit in consideration of having a share in the property if recovered is not necessarily opposed to public policy since cases may easily be supposed in which it would be in furtherance of right and justice that a suitor who had a just title to property and no means to support it should be assisted in this way But agreements purporting to be made to meet such cases when found to be extortionate and unconscionable so as to be inequitable or to be entered into for improper objects as for the purpose of gambling in litigation or of injuring others by encouraging unrighteous suits are contrary to public policy and ought not to have effect given to them Since by the law of India a champertous agreement does not constitute a punishable offence an action in that country founded on alleged champerty to recover losses and costs incurred in litigation cannot be sustained on the ground that a remedy by action accrues where an indictable offence has been committed No action will lie for improperly putting the law in motion in the name of a third party unless it is alleged and proved that it has been done maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause In the absence of such proof an action for losses and costs incurred in defending a suit will not lie as against a person who is alleged to have been a mover in that suit and to have had an interest in it but who had not been made a party to the record since such a state of things creates no legal privity from which a promise can be implied on which an action on contract can be founded nor does it ex hypothesi constitute a legal wrong RAMCOOMAR COONDOO v CHUNDER KANTO MOOKERJEE

27 ———— Maintenance—Gambling in litigation—Agreement opposed to public policy—Contract Act (IX of 1872) s 23—The judgment of the Privy Council in Ramcoomer Coondoo v Chunder Kanto Mookerjee L R 4 I A 23 I L R 2 Calc 233 shows that while the specific English law of maintenance and champerty has not been introduced into India and while fair agreements to supply funds to carry on litigation in consideration of having a share of the property if recovered should not be regarded as per se opposed to public policy yet such agreements should be carefully watched and if extortionate and unconscionable or made not with the bona fide object of assisting for a reasonable recompense a claim believed to be just, but for the purpose of gambling in litigation or of injuring or oppressing others by encouraging unrighteous suits should be held contrary to public policy and not enforced For the purposes of meeting the expenses of an appeal to the High Court the appellant on the advice of his legal adviser executed a bond for R25 000 in consideration of the obligee agreeing to defray such expenses The obligor agreed to pay the R25 000 within one year from his recovering possession of the property in suit and at the request of the obligor's pleader the obligee advanced R3 700 which was applied to the expenses of the appeal The High Court dismissed the appeal and in a deed executed by the obligor in favour of the obligee and others for the purpose of defraying the expenses of a further appeal to the Privy Council he admitted his liability under the former bond The Privy Council decreed his appeal and he obtained possession of the property in suit but declined to pay the R25 000 upon which the obligee sued upon the bond It was found that apart from the moneys borrowed by the obligor from time to time he was without even the means of subsistence that he executed the bond with his eyes open and perfectly understood his position and the effect of both the instruments executed by him that no fraud or improper pressure appeared to have been applied to him that his legal advisers had acted honestly and to the best of their ability in his interests that there was nothing to show that having regard to the risks of the litigation he could have obtained the assistance necessary for the prosecution of his appeal on better terms than those contained in the bond that without such assistance he could not have appealed to the High Court and that the obligee gave him such assistance upon his application Held also that the obligee could not under the circumstances have considered both that the obligor's claim was a just one and reasonably likely to succeed and that the R25 000 was a reasonable recompense in the event of success for the advance of R3 700 and the bond was therefore a gambling in litigation which it would be contrary to public policy to enforce The Court gave the plaintiff a decree for the R3 700 actually advanced with simple interest at 20 per cent per annum from the date of the bond to the date of the decree with costs in proportion and interest at 6 per cent per annum on the R3 700 interests and costs from the date of the decree until payment CHUNNI KUAR v RUP SINGH in British India. The Magistrate who held a preliminary enquiry into the matter committed the accused to the Sessions Court on a charge under s. 3 S of the Penal Code (XLV of 1860). The Sessions Judge amended the charge to one under s. 3 on the ground that, as the accused had been extradited on a charge under s. 379, they could be tried and convicted only under that section and no other. At the end of the trial, the Sessions Judge found that the accused were guilty of theft, but not of dacoity, acquitted them. Held reversing the order of acquittal, that it was competent to the Sessions Judge to alter the charge under s. 227 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882) and under s. 235 to convict the accused of the minor offence which the ... has taken. Held also, that the Code of Criminal Procedure was applicable as lex fori. If the prosecution establishes certain acts constituting an offence and the Court misapplies the law by charging and convicting an accused person for an offence other than that for which he should have been properly charged, and if notwithstanding such error the accused has by his defence endeavoured to meet the accusation of the commission of those acts, then the Appellate Court may alter the charge or finding and convict him for an offence which those acts properly constitute, provided the accused be not prejudiced by the alteration in the finding. 85 ——— Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) s. 423 (b)—Alteration of finding under ss. 109, 211 Penal Code to one under s. 193.—Where an accused was convicted under ss. 109, 211 Penal Code, and the Judge referred the case to the High Court recommending that a conviction under s. 193 Penal Code with an enhanced sentence should be substituted for the conviction and sentence under ss. 109, 211,—Held that in proceedings taken on a charge of abetment of an offence under s. 211 it would be improper to convict the accused of intentionally giving false evidence as the two offences are entirely of a different character and in making a defence on a charge of the first named offence, the accused could not be regarded as pleading to a charge of intentionally giving false evidence in regard to some particular statement. To substitute a conviction for the latter offence for one for the former offence would be in effect to alter the charge to one for a different offence without the accused having an opportunity of pleading to it. 86 ——— Conviction of offence of different character Legality of—Charge of theft—Conviction of being member of unlawful assembly—Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898) s. 423—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) ss. 143 and 379.—The accused were convicted of theft that was the only charge which they were called upon to answer. In appeal the District Magistrate held that no theft had been committed but he convicted the accused of being members of an unlawful assembly. Held that on the trial the accused were called upon to answer only a charge of theft, they were never called upon to answer any other charge and they therefore could not fairly be convicted on their appeal of an offence of an entirely different character. It is on the proceedings taken before the Magistrate that the facts constituting an offence for which a trial is held are made known to the accused, and the law is applied by the Magistrate to the facts established, so as to constitute the charge which the accused is called upon to answer. It therefore cannot be said that sufficient notice was given to the accused, because mention of s. 147 of the Penal Code (rioting) together with theft was made in the final report of the police as the offences considered to have been established and that the accused must have been made acquainted with such report. On appeal the Sessions Judge not only found that the common object was not the taking of the mangoes, but that the dispute between the parties was as to certain land. He, however dismissed the appeal and confirmed the conviction. Held that, as the accused were convicted on a different finding of fact from that to which they were called upon to plead and to defend themselves at the trial, they were entitled to an acquittal. In appeal the District Magistrate held that no theft had been committed, but he convicted the accused of being members of an unlawful assembly. Held that on the trial the accused were called upon to answer only a charge of theft; they were never called upon to answer any other charge, and they therefore could not fairly be convicted on their appeal of an offence of an entirely different character. It is on the proceedings taken before the Magistrate that the facts constituting an offence for which a trial is held are made known to the accused, and the law is applied by the Magistrate to the facts established so as to constitute the charge which the accused is called upon to answer. It therefore cannot be said that sufficient notice was given to the accused, because mention of s. 147 of the Penal Code (rioting) together with theft was made in the final report of the police as the offences considered to have been established, and that the accused must have been made acquainted with such report. Marseilles was at first named as the port of discharge but subsequently the vessel was ordered to Cette a French port a little to the west of Marseilles and bills of lading made out for Cette were tendered to the master for signature The master refused to sign the bills of lading or sail for Cette The vessel s draught of water when loaded was such that she could not have entered or lain afloat in Cette harbour without discharging a portion of her cargo The cost of lightening the vessel by lighters outside the harbour would under the charter-party fall on the charterers and they were willing to incur the expenses necessary for that purpose Held that it was no breach of the charter party by the master to refuse to sail to Cette or to sign bills of lading for that port GRAHAM & CO v MERVANJI NUSSERVANJI

6 ———— Principal and agent—Charter party signed by agents for master and owner —Parties to suit—Liability of master—Liability of Agents—Master of ship the agent of charterer to sign bill of lading — Right of master to recover from charterers sums paid by master as damages for short delivery of cargo—Appropriation of payments—Contract Act (IX of 1872) ss 69 230 235 —By a charter party dated 20th September 1880 F M & Co as agents for master and owner let the steam-ship Hutton to E for a term of not less than three and not more than four months for the sum of R15 000 per month payable in advance By subsequent agreement the term was extended to 30th March 1881 and the charterer was to pay at the rate of R18 000 a month for the extended time On 24th February 1881 the ship being about to proceed on her last voyage to Calcutta and thence to Bombay E finding himself unable to pay more than R6 000 out of the sum of R18 000 which was then due as hire for the month ending 9th March 1881 requested the plaintiff to pay F M & Co on his behalf the remaining R12 000 The plaintiffs did so in consideration of an agreement whereby E assigned to them all the freight payable to E and all benefits under the said charter-party in respect of the then intended voyage of the Hutton It was also agreed between the plaintiffs and F that the said ship should be consigned to the plaintiffs at Calcutta and also to them at Bombay and that the plaintiffs should receive all the freight passage money etc., to be recovered for the said voyage the plaintiffs charging two per cent commission on the gross value of the freight shipped in Calcutta and two per cent on the amount of freight collected by them in Bombay and interest on the said sum of R12 000 at the rate of nine per cent. per annum Due notice of this agreement was given to F M & Co On the 11th March E being unable to pay the R6 000 requested the plaintiffs to pay that sum to F M & Co on his behalf which the plaintiffs did —E agreeing that the said payment should be on the same terms as those on which the R12 000 had been paid. The ship having proceeded to Calcutta returned with cargo to Bombay where she arrived on 2nd April 1881. F M & Co., as agents for master and owner refused to allow the plaintiffs to collect the freight payable in Bombay and collected it themselves. defendants or their agents in respect of the freight and for payment of the balance found due after deducting the sums properly payable to the defendants for hire of the ship and for R400 damages sustained by the plaintiffs by reason of the wrongful act of the defendants whereby the plaintiffs had been deprived of the two per cent commission The plaintiffs alleged that the balance due to them would be about R9 500 The first defendant did not appear The second defendant (the master) contended that he was not liable that F M & Co had been especially appointed as agents of the owner; that they were not his (the master's) agents, and that they had no authority to sign the charter party for him He admitted that the sum of R12 000 had been paid to F M & Co by the plaintiffs as agents for the owner but as to the R6 000 he denied that it had been paid to F M & Co on his account or on account of the owner He further alleged that there was a large sum due by E in respect of hire of the ship and other proper claims against him under the charter party and that the defendants were therefore justified in refusing the demands of the plaintiffs as assignees of E until the whole of their claims against E were liquidated. He alleged that F M & Co had received the freight of the ship amounting to R20 426 and he claimed a lien on this sum in respect of the sum of R19,282 due for hire and other charges on the said ship and R605 for money paid for short delivery of goods The plaintiffs subsequently made F M & Co defendants to the suit In their written statement F M & Co stated that they had signed the charter party as agents only and not as principals and they contended that the plaintiffs could not proceed simultaneously against the first defendant and the second defendant but must elect to proceed separately against either and further that the plaintiffs could not proceed simultaneously against themselves (F M & Co) and the second defendant but should elect to proceed separately against either They admitted the receipt of the R1? 000 as agents for the first defendant and not as agents of the second defendant As to the R6 000 they alleged that it had been paid to them not on account of the Hutton but in respect of claims which they had against E in connection with the Clan Gordon, another ship which had been chartered by E They admitted the receipt of the freight of the Hutton amounting to R20,426 but claimed a lien on this sum in respect of hire and other proper charges due under the charter party Held that the second defendant (the master) was not liable on the charter party He had given no authority to F M & Co to sign it as his agents and his conduct in acting under the charter party being referable to his character of and duty as master did not amount to ratification But inasmuch as he claimed to deduct from the freight received in Bombay sums which were paid either by him or to F M & Co for him he was so far a proper party to the suit Held also that under s ?30 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872) F M & Co were not liable as principals on the charter party as they appeared on the face of the charter party to have signed merely as agents But they were liable under s 235 of the Contract Act for having untruly represented themselves to be the authorized agents of the master to enter on his behalf into the contract therein contained. Their liability was limited to the amount which could have been recovered from the master if he had really been their principal. No difference was made in their liability by the fact that the owner was also liable As to the R6 000 —Held on the evidence that the plaintiffs at the time of the payment had specifically appropriated this sum to the hire then due for the Hutton Held further that the charter party was one of the class known as locatio navis et operarum magistri; that under such a charter party the master would as between owner and charterer sign bills of lading as agent of the charterer; that as between the owner and the charterer the latter was liable to defray the damages for non performance of the contracts contained in the bills of lading including damages for short delivery of cargo; and that such being the liability of E as charterer the plaintiffs as his assignees were bound by all the equities affecting him so that the defendants might set off as against the plaintiffs whatever the owner of the Hutton might have set off against E if he had been the plaintiff The second defendant (the master) alleged that he had paid in Bombay certain sums of money to consignees as damages for short delivery of cargo and he claimed credit for such payments as against the plaintiffs. Held that he had no power to bind E by making such payments on his behalf in Bombay where both E and the plaintiffs were resident without the consent either of E or of the plaintiffs In order to establish these charges against E and his assignees (the plaintiffs) it was necessary for the defendants to prove either that they were in fact due in which case the master would be justified in paying them under s. 69 of the Contract Act or that their correctness had been admitted by E or his agents The defendants having failed to produce the required proof the claim of the second defendant was disallowed. 7 ———— Misdescription of tonnage of ship—Misrepresentation in contract—Contract Act (XI of 1872) ss 10 13 14 18 19—Condition precedent—The defendants in Bombay chartered a ship from the plaintiffs which was described in the charter party as of the measurement of about 2 700—2 800 tons nett register The ship had never been in Bombay and was wholly unknown to the defendants. Evidence was given that in the negotiations for the charter party the plaintiffs stated to the defendants that the ship was certainly not more than 2 800 tonnage register She however turned out to be of the registered tonnage of 3 045 tons and the defendants refused to accept her in fulfilment of the charter party Held by PARSONS J that the defendants were entitled to treat the contract as void by reason of the erroneous statement of the plaintiffs with regard to the size of the ship (Contract Act IX of 1872 ss 10 13 14 18 19) Held on appeal by SARGENT C.J and FARRAN J (1) that the representation in the charter party as to the tonnage of the vessel was intended to be a substantive part of the contract between the parties (2) that the statement in the contract was a condition precedent of which the defendants were entitled to avail themselves whether or no they would have suffered loss had they accepted the ship (3) that the facts justified the defendants in repudiating the contract OCEANIC STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY v SOONDERDAS DHURUMSEY

8 ——————— Optional clause—Choice of ports to load cargo—Election of port — The plaintiff chartered the defendants ship to proceed from Bombay to Jedda and thence carry a cargo of pilgrims to Calcutta The charter party contained the following clause — Owners to have the option of requiring the charterer to ship salt at Ras Rawaya or at Aden to fill up the lower holds of the steamer at a lump sum of R12 000 payable before delivery at the port of discharge R2 000 to be deposited by the charterer on account of the above freight, out of which R1 500 to be paid here (Bombay) 48 hours before sailing and R500 before departure of the steamer from Jedda Before the ship left Bombay the plaintiff was called upon to pay and paid the R1 500 advance freight On the ship s arrival at Jedda the plaintiff was required by the defendants agent to name the port where he intended to load the salt and pay the R500 named in the charter party The plaintiff in reply named Aden and paid the R500 which the defendants agent acknowledged as received for filling up salt to go to Aden This was on the 22nd July The captain however believing that the plaintiff would not find salt at Aden for Calcutta refused to sail to Aden to load the salt unless the expense of going there and returning to Jedda for the pilgrims was guaranteed by the plaintiff which the plaintiff refused to do. Subsequently on the 30th July the captain on the instructions of the defendants, informed the plaintiff that the choice of the port to load salt was with the defendants and that they named Ras Rawaya as the port where the plaintiff was required to load his salt and refused to go to Aden The plaintiff refused to go to Ras Rawaya. There was to the defendants' knowledge no salt at Ras Rawaya. There was plenty of salt at Aden though none offering for Calcutta owing to the prices ruling at the latter port The captain refusing to load the pilgrims unless the balance of the R12 000 salt freight was paid in advance the plaintiff paid it and brought this suit to recover the whole of the said sum Held that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed (i) because by the true construction of the contract the choice of the port must be taken to be with the plaintiff who had to do all that was necessary to provide the salt the option given by the contract to the owners being as to whether they should require salt to be loaded or not; and (ii) because if the election of the port was with the defendants they through their agent at Jedda, conclusively determined their election in favour of Aden at latest on the 22nd July when they accepted the R500 for filling up salt to go to Aden. 9 ——————— Mistake in date—Mistake mutual or unilateral—Rectification or rescission of contract —The plaintiffs required a steamer to sail from Jedda fifteen days after the Haj in order to convey pilgrims returning to Bombay They chartered a steamer from the defendants in June 1891 for that purpose The defendants chartered their steamers by English dates The date inserted in the charter party was the 10th August 1892 (fifteen days after the Haj) The 10th August 1892 was given or accepted by the plaintiffs in the belief that it corresponded with the fifteenth day after the Haj The defendants had no belief on the subject and contracted only with respect to the English date The 19th July 1892 and not the 10th August 1892 in fact corresponded with the fifteenth day after the Haj On finding out the mistake in March 1892 the plaintiff brought this suit for rectification of the charter party by the insertion of the correct date the 19th July 1892 instead of the erroneous date the 10th August 1892 Meanwhile the defendants had let all their steamers and could not give the plaintiff one for the 19th July 1892 Held that the agreement was one for the 10th August 1892 and that as that date was a matter materially inducing the agreement there could be no rectification but only cancellation even if both parties were under a mistake Held further that the mistake was not mutual but on the plaintiffs part only and therefore there could be no rectification A plaintiff seeking rectification must show that there was an actual concluded contract antecedent to the instrument sought to be rectified, and that such contract is inaccurately represented in the instrument. 10 ——————— Bill of lading—Freight—Rate of freight in charter party—Contract by sub-charterer with shipper for freight at lower rate—Refusal by captain to sign bills of lading at lower rate than rate in charter-party—Payment by shipper of difference under protest —On 3rd March 1898 A D & Co. a firm of freight jobbers in Bombay contracted to provide the plaintiffs with freight for 3 000 tons of cargo to Liverpool at 16s 6d per ton in a steamer to be subsequently named and on the same day handed to the plaintiffs three shipping orders addressed to the captain of the ship the name of which was to be afterwards inserted. In these shipping orders the higher and lower rate clause was as follows —"Bill of lading if required at lower or higher rate difference payable here as customary This clause the plaintiffs struck out from each of the shipping orders according to their usual practice On 11th May 1898, the defendants chartered the steamship Paddington of which they were also the owners' agents in Bombay and on the 12th May assigned a half share of their interest under the charter party to K D & Co By the charter party a full and complete cargo was to be loaded and the freight was to be £1 10 per ton. The captain however was authorized to sign clean bills of lading at any rate of freight required by the charterers without prejudice to the charter-party but at not less than the chartered rate unless the difference was paid in cash before sailing K D & Co having thus sub-chartered the Paddington declared that steamer to the plaintiffs for 2 747 tons of cargo under their contract of the 3rd March 1898 and the name of the steamer was then entered in the shipping orders for that amount of cargo The plaintiffs thereupon commenced to load a cargo of wheat. By the 21st June 2 100 tons had been put on board; mate s receipts were given to the plaintiffs and bills of lading were prepared by them stating the rate of freight to be 16*s* 6*d* per ton as per the shipping orders and were presented for signature to the captain He refused to sign them unless the difference between 16*s* 6*d* and the chartered rate of £1 10 was paid to him as provided in the charter party The plaintiffs thereupon refused to ship any more cargo and demanded the return of the cargo already shipped on board the Paddington. On the 24th June the Paddington sailed from Bombay the captain having previously authorized the defendants to sign bills of lading for him after his departure provided they were in accordance with the charter party After some delay the plaintiffs on the 29th June accepted bills of lading for the 2 100 tons at £1 10 and paid under protest the difference between that rate and their contract rate (16*s* 6*d*) and certain other sums for which the defendants as agents for the owners claimed a lien The plaintiffs now sued to recover from the defendants the amount so paid under protest The defendants contended that as agents for owners they were justified in refusing to give bills of lading until the sums due and for which they claimed a lien were paid. Held that the defendants had no lien for the sums paid and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount claimed. Per CANDY J —The plaintiffs were entitled upon demand to have the said 2 100 tons re-delivered to them by the captain On 29th June the plaintiffs were entitled to clean bills of lading at 30*s* and the sum paid by them under protest in order to obtain such bills of lading was recoverable by them. Under the circumstances the defendants had no lien for freight and demurrage. Per STARLING J —The captain was justified in refusing to re deliver the said 2 100 tons. 3 ———— Decree Meaning of —The effect of the proviso to s 3 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 taken in connection with the definition of the word decree in s 2 is that in all suits pending when that Code came into force the practice and procedure to be followed down to the final result of such suits (i e when nothing remains to be done but to execute the decree or to appeal from it) are the same as previously existed but that in all subsequent proceedings in execution of the decree or in appeal from it the practice and procedure provided by the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 are to be observed. The word decree in s 3 of the Civil Procedure Code 1877 means an order final in its nature and does not include an interlocutory order such as an order of reference to take accounts although such order may in general be properly termed a decree and therefore a suit which has been referred by the Court to the Commissioner to take accounts is still in a stage prior to decree within the meaning of s 3 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877 RUSTOMJI BURJORJI v KESSOWJI NAIK

8. ———————— Agent's right to execute decree obtained by him as agent—Waiver—Execution of decree—P filed a suit in the second class Subordinate Judge's Court at Mahad. As P resided at Thana outside the jurisdiction of the Mahad Court she authorized her agent under a general power of-attorney to conduct the suit on her behalf. The agent carried on the litigation up to a final decree passed by the High Court on appeal in P's favour The agent then sought to execute the decree. The Court at Mahad passed an order upon his darkhast granting only partial execution Against this order the agent filed an appeal in the District Court at Thana. Then for the first time the judgment debtors challenged the agent's right to represent P who was residing within the District Court's jurisdiction. This objection prevailed and the appeal was dismissed. Held that the agent could not be prevented from executing the decree which he had obtained as agent No objection had been taken to the agent's right to represent P at any stage of the litigation prior to the final decree That objection must therefore be deemed to have been virtually waived and could not be raised after the defendants had had their chance of success in the litigations. The plaintiffs appeared on that day The defendants did not appear but there was in Court a pleader who had been instructed by the two principal defendants at the outset and who had filed his vakalatnama There was nothing to show that he had ever received any other instructions whatever either as to the facts of the case or the conduct of the defence or that the defendants had done anything beyond giving the pleader the instructions above referred to Under these circumstances the plaintiffs gave their evidence and the Munsif decreed the claim Held that under the circumstances stated the defendant's pleader must be taken not to have been in Court on the date fixed for the purpose of defending the suit on behalf of the defendants inasmuch as upon that part of the case he had not been instructed that it was therefore a fair inference that the defendants did not appear and the case was disposed of under s 157 of the Civil Procedure Code; and that under these circumstances the provisions of s 108 were applicable and the decree was an ex parte decision which it was open to the Munsif to reconsider Hira Das v Hira Lal I L R 7 All 538 followed. CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE, ACT XIV OF 1882 (ACT X OF 1877)—continued

The words "the decree" in s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure mean the whole decree made in the suit. Therefore in a case where a decree has been passed ex-parte against some only of several defendants, the effect of its being set aside on their application under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure is that the whole decree made in the suit is set aside notwithstanding that some of the defendants had entered appearance at the original hearing. 1. ——— Documentary evidence.—Parties are required to have with them in Court, at the first hearing of the suit, all their documentary evidence but need not file it then unless it is called for MAHEUB HOSSEIN v PATASU KUMARI [1 B. L. R., A. C., 120 10 W R. 179

2. ——— Filing documents with plaint—Translation of document—By s 128 of Act VIII of 1859 it was not necessary to file with the plaint all the documents that the plaintiff intended to give in evidence A document which is to be given in evidence need not be translated previous to the hearing of the case KAMEENEE DOSSEE v HURROMONEY DOSSEE [Bourke O C. 91 Cor 151

3 ——— Documents produced but not filed.—This section applies to documents which have been produced at the filing of the plaint but not filed, and in this way is not incompatible with s. 39 IREMSOOKH CHUNDER v RAJKISTO MITTER 1 Hyde 145

4. ——— Exhibits—Documents produced in Court under s 128 Act VIII of 18 9 become upon and by reason of their production exhibits in the case LAOJEE GUNESH v RAO TALEE PERSHAD 8 W R. 91

5 ——— Right to adduce fresh documentary evidence after issues settled—Ground for rejecting or adm tting—Under s. 128 Act VIII of 1859 the parties though not entitled as of right to adduce fresh documentary evidence after the issues in the case are settled may yet tender such evidence stating the grounds upon which it was not tendered at an earlier stage and the Judge may receive or reject such evidence but the grounds on which he acts should be stated on the record. WATSON & Co v KUNHYA BAHADOOR 9 W R. 294

6 ——— Documents not filed with record owing to mistake of Court's officers—A Civil Court is bound to receive as evidence authenticated documents named in the plaint and filed by the plaintiff's pleader on the day appointed for fixing issues even though through inadvertence of the amlah they were not made part of the record. RAM RUNJUN CHUCKERBUTTY v ANUND COOMAR MOOKERJEE 15 W R. 323

7 ——— Documentary evidence Production of.—A party is bound under Act VIII of 18 9 s 128 to be prepared at all points with his documentary evidence and as soon as the Court has framed the issues which it thinks proper to lay down at once to tender (if called upon) the documentary evidence bearing thereon The words first hearing in the suit are defined by s. 139 and do not mean the first hearing on the issue GOUR HURPE CHOWDHRY v IRAN HUREE LAHA 21 W R. 42

8 ——— The main object of s 128 was to prevent parties from manufacturing evidence pending the trial to meet unexpected exigencies and not to shut out true good and valuable evidence merely because the party had without good and assignable cause abstained from bringing it before the Court at the first hearing IKRAM HOSSEIN v RAM LOCHUN DUTT 23 W R. 29

9 ——— Production of documents—S 138 of the Civil Procedure Code was enacted to prevent fraud by the late production of suspicious documents and not to shut out formal evidence beyond suspicion such as certified copies of public documents like records of Government. Ikram v Ram Lochun 23 W R., 29 followed RANCHHOD HIRABHAI v SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA [I. 1. ——— Opportunity for Court to inspect evidence—A Court cannot be said to have received documents as admissible in evidence when for want of time to inspect and consider them it orders them to be filed nor would it be wrong in law in rejecting or returning them after proper inspection the object of s 129 Act VIII of 1859 being that papers should be produced in a regular manner and inspected by a Court at its convenience SOODUKHINA CHOWDHRY v RAJ MOHUN BOSE [11 W R. 350

2. ——— Reception on record of irrelevant and inadmissible documents—Attention drawn to the neglected provision of the Code of Civil Procedure 1859 (s 1 9) which prohibits Courts from receiving on the record of a case without restriction and without discrimination documents which are either irrelevant or inadmissible ISSUR CHUNDER GHOSE v RUSSEEK LAL MUNDUL [11 W R. 576

3 ——— Admission and rejection of documents—At the stage of a suit referred to in Act VIII of 18 9 ss 128 129 and 132 the Court ought to sort the documents tendered into two classes those relevant and admissible and those irrelevant and inadmissible and to reject in limine all documents which are evidently such as cannot be used as evidence in the suit The admission of a document at this stage does not imply that it is evidence but merely declares that it may if properly treated be used as evidence in the suit and filing it as a part of the record does not confer any authority on such document or operate to dispense with any proof of genuineness Courts of first instance ought to specify what portions of the documentary evidence on the record they have accepted and what portions they have refused to listen to All the proceedings of the parties in respect of the use of documentary evidence are matters to be recorded on the proceedings of the Court by the Judge's own note TUMEEZODDY v BUSARUT 21 W R. 76

In a case where a party summoned to attend as a witness refuses to attend and give evidence and the party who requires the evidence is unable to make out his case without it his suit should not be dismissed for want of proof when the points on which he fails depend upon matters of fact which may reasonably be presumed to be peculiarly in the knowledge of the defaulting parties as for instance in the present case the extent of their own shares and the amount they had paid on account of revenue HEMANGINI DASI v PAMNIDHI KUNDU [1 B L R, S N 10 10 W R, 158

8 ———— Recognition of transfer by Court —A Court charged with the execution of a decree has no other discretion with regard to noticing a transfer thereof than that which is given to it by s. 208 which only applies to cases where the transferee can and does come forward to claim execution for himself instead of the original decree holder BHAGUT CHUNDER ROY v NAZIR ALY KHAN 10 W R. 354

9 ———— Recognition of transfer by Court —A party to a suit can enforce any decree he may get as a matter of right but an assignee of such decree can only do so after obtaining the Court's permission which depends entirely on the Court's discretion An assignee therefore is not in the same position as the original decree holder and is not entitled to have the same privileges SHAMA SUDDO DUTT v NOBIN CHUNDER BOSE to set aside the proceedings on the ground that the execution was fraudulent and not warranted by the decree Held that the Judge had no right to entertain such an application or to reopen at the instance of a third party execution proceedings which had come to an end. At the sale the tenure was purchased by N. S then brought a suit against B and N to set aside the sale on the ground that the rent-decree and all execution-proceedings taken thereunder were fraudulent and alleging that B was the actual purchaser in the name of N. An objection was taken that the suit would not lie and that the questions in the suit were such as could have been determined and were determined by the Court executing the decree;—Held that neither s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code nor the corresponding s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 had any application to proceedings in execution of a decree under Act X of 1859 and that the suit being one to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud, was maintainable Saroda Churn Chuckerbutty v Mahomed Isuf Meah I L R 11 Calc 376 distinguished BROJO GOPAL SARKAR v BUSSATUNNISSA BIBI [I. 15 —————— Question as to whether purchase-money has been paid within time Conditional decree—The plaintiff in a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption obtained a decree to the effect mentioned in s 214 of the Civil Procedure Code. On payment by him of the purchase-money into Court the defendants objected in the execution department to such payment on the ground that it had not been made within time. The Court which made the decree disallowed the objection. The defendants appealed from the order disallowing the objection; they had previously appealed from the decree The Appellate Court heard both appeals together and holding that the purchase money had not been paid into Court within time reversed the decree and allowed the objection. The plaintiff preferred a second appeal to the High Court from the Appellate Court's decree which was admitted. He also preferred an appeal from the appellate order allowing the objection but this appeal was rejected as being beyond time and such order became final Held that inasmuch as the question whether the plaintiff had paid the purchase-money into Court within time was not one relating to the execution of the decree within the meaning of s 244 of the Civil Procedure Code but was one which should be decided in the suit itself and therefore the proceedings in the execution department touching that question were ill founded, such order was not a bar to the hearing of the second appeal preferred by the plaintiff MUHAMMAD ALI v DEBI DIN LAL I. The decree declared the land liable to be sold for repayment of the debt The judgment-debtor having died before the decree was executed A and B were made parties to the proceedings in execution and the land was attached A and B objected to the attachment on the ground that their shares in the land were not liable to be sold in execution of the decree as they were not parties to the suit. 26. ———— Question as to amount received under mortgage—Attempt to obtain redemption of a usufructuary mortgage by means of an application in execution.—Certain mortgagees held a mortgage which, in its inception was a simple mortgage but which was to become a usufructuary mortgage upon non-payment of the mortgage debt by a certain date. The mortgage debt was not paid within the time limited. The mortgagees sued on the covenant in their bond and obtained a decree for possession declaring them entitled to remain in possession until the mortgage debt was satisfied from the usufruct. Some time after the mortgagees had got possession under this decree the mortgagors applied, ostensibly under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure for recovery of possession of the mortgaged property and for payment of a large sum of money which they alleged the mortgagees to have collected as profits in excess of what was due under the mortgage. Held that such an application would not lie. —Fresh suit —In a suit for redemption of a mortgage a decree was passed for possession by redemption on the plaintiff paying the sum of R43,625-7-0 the amount of the mortgage-debt. Prior to the institution of the suit the defendant had taken proceedings in the Judge's Court to foreclose the mortgage and the plaintiff paid the above mentioned sum into that Court for the defendant who took it. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court from the decree directing him to pay R43,625-7-0 as the mortgage-debt, and obtained a decree by which the decree of the first Court was modified and the amount payable on redemption was reduced to R2,155 The plaintiff then took out execution of the decree to recover from the defendant the difference between the two sums with interest Held that the effect of the Appellate Court's decree was to direct restitution of any sum paid under the first Court's decree which was disallowed by the Appellate Court's decree and that the question was clearly one for determination by the Court executing the decree and not by separate suit being expressly provided for by s. 583 of the Civil Procedure Code Held also that the decree holder was entitled to restitution of the amount with interest Irger v Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris L R 3 P C 465 referred to Ram Ghulam v Dwarka Rai I L R 7 All 170 distinguished by MAHMOOD J JASWANT SINGH v DIP SINGH of the judgment debtor—Claims to attached property where representative judgment debtor claims to hold the attached property as trustee of third party—Civil Procedure Code 1882 ss 278 283 —The plaintiffs sued for a declaration that certain property was liable to be attached in execution of a decree obtained by them in suit No. 501 of 1888 against the estates of one G deceased who had been the head of a math situate in the Dharwar District. The property had been attached in execution but the defendant, who was G's successor in office had obtained the removal of the attachment on the ground that the property belonged to the math and not to G personally and was not therefore liable to satisfy the decree The plaintiffs thereupon brought this suit. The lower Appellate Court passed a decree for the plaintiffs and granted the declaration. On second appeal it was contended that under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code the question ought to have been decided in execution of the decree in suit No 501 of 1888 and that a separate suit would not lie Held on the merits that the decree of the lower Appeal Court should be reversed and the suit dismissed. Per RANADE J—Where the representative of a judgment-debtor puts forward a personal claim to property which is attached as assets of the judgment-debtor in his hands the investigation of the claim must be made in execution under the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure But where he asserts that he holds the property in trust for or on behalf of or as manager of some third person or body of persons or of a religious charity or institution the claim must be investigated under the provisions of ss 278 to 283 and the order passed therein cannot be challenged by an appeal but must form the subject of a separate suit Per PARSONS J—Ss 278 to 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure have no reference to any claim preferred or objection made by any person who is on the record as a party to the suit. 161. ———— Transfer of decree by operation of law—Representative of original decree holder—Right to appeal against order refusing execution—R died in May 1869 leaving his property to his executors in trust for the appellant P and he directed that the property should be assigned by them to the appellant as soon as he came of age In August 1868 the executors filed this suit against L as manager of certain landed property belonging to the Hallai Bhattia caste and known as Mahajan Wadi to recover certain loans made by them as executors to him as manager of the said wadi. On the 11th May 1870 while this suit was pending the executors assigned all the property of their testator to the appellant P By the deed of assignment they assigned to him inter alia all moveable property debts claims and things in action whatsoever vested in them as such executors No steps were taken subsequently to this assignment to make the assignee P a party to the suit which proceeded without amendment. On the 23rd January 1873 a decree was passed for the plaintiffs on the record for R31 ?72 13 5 and it was declared that the said sum should be a first charge on the rents and income of the said wadi Subsequently to this decree L opened an account in the name of the appellant P and from time to time made payments to him on account of the decree The last of these payments was made on the 19th November 1884 None of these payments were certified to the Court. In 1885 the respondent J was appointed to the office of manager of the Hallai Bhattia caste in the place of L the original defendant in the suit On the 4th January 1886 his attorneys wrote to the appellant's attorneys offering to pay the appellant the balance due to him under the decree Subsequently however he refused to make any payment to the appellant whereupon the appellant applied for execution of the decree against him as manager of the said wadi He claimed to be a transferee of the decree under s 232 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) His application was refused by the Judge in chambers Held that the appellant was a transferee of the decree within the meaning of s 232 of the Civil Procedure Code The decree had been transferred to him by operation of law As such he was entitled to sue out execution and was to be regarded as the representative of the original decree holder within the meaning of cl (c) of s 244 of the Civil Procedure Code and had a right of appeal against the order of the Judge in chambers refusing execution PURMANANDAS JIWANDAS v VALLABDAS WALLJI [I. Certain property was attached in execution and the sons objected that the property in question had come to them as the self acquired property of their uncle M who had died after K and that they had inherited no property from their father K. Their objection was followed by the Court executing the decree and the property was ordered to be released from attachment. In a suit brought by the assignee of the decree holder against the sons of K to establish his right to proceed against the property in question in execution of the decree against K —Held that the question of the liability of the property to be taken in execution in the hands of the defendant was a question arising between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed or their representatives and relating to the execution etc of the decree within the meaning of s 244 of the Civil Procedure Code and that the suit was consequently not maintainable. 166 ——————— Party — Representative of a party —Auction purchaser —Order in summary inquiry —A purchaser at a Court sale is not a party or the representative of a party within the meaning of s 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). He is therefore not bound by any order in the miscellaneous inquiry under s 280 281 or 282 of the Code. Nor is he bound by the specifications contained in the proclamation of sale of the claims of intervenors. Certain property was attached in execution of a decree. The defendants intervened and objected to the attachment on the ground that they held the property on permanent tenancy. Their objection was allowed and the Court made an order directing the property to be sold subject to the defendants' rights. In the proclamation of sale however it was stated that the Court did not guarantee the title of the intervenors. The plaintiff purchased the property at the Court sale. He then sued to eject the defendants. The defendants pleaded that the plaintiff had purchased subject to their rights as permanent tenants. Both the lower Courts rejected the plaintiff s claim on the ground that he was bound by the order in the miscellaneous inquiry which had become conclusive by reason of his having omitted to sue within one year from the date of the order. Held reversing the lower Court s decision that the order in the miscellaneous inquiry was not binding on the plaintiff as an auction purchaser. 167 ——————— Purchaser of rights of Hindu widow—Representative —After the death of a childless Hindu widow a lessee from her of property which had belonged to her husband obtained against her vendees of part of the same property a decree for damages for wrongfully keeping him out of possession. The effect of the decision was to decree the claim against the estate of the widow and to exempt from liability the judgment debtors personally and the property which they had purchased. In execution of the decree the said property was sold and was purchased by the decree-holder; one of the judgment debtors had died during the execution proceedings and her son was duly impleaded as her representative and he raised no objection to the attachment and sale. Subsequently this son sold his rights and interests in the property and his vendee sued the decree holder to recover possession on the ground that the decree being limited to the estate of the childless Hindu widow the defendant as purchaser could not acquire by the sale any rights superior to those of the widow that those rights had expired upon her death and left nothing to be sold and that on her death the property devolved upon the plaintiff's vendor and had thence passed to the plaintiff. Held that the plaintiff s vendor was a party to the suit within the meaning of s 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code and that he n t having objected to the sale in execution of the decree neither he n r the plaintiff could go behind that sale or claim the property upon any title which he might have asserted in the execution proceedings and that the suit was barred by s 244. Ram Ghulam v Hazaru Kuar I L R 7 All 547 followed. Bahori Lal v Gauri Sahai I L R 8 All, 62 distinguished. Mulmantri v Ashfak Ahmad I L R 9 All 605 Roop Lall Dass v Bekani Meah I L R 15 Calc 437 and Ravunni Menon v Kunju Nayar I L R 10 Mad 117 referred to. The suit was compromised and by a consent decree it was declared that the defendants held by mirasi tenure and they were directed to pay rent as before or in default the plaintiff should take possession The plaintiff afterwards applied in execution for possession alleging that the rent had not been paid The defendants pleaded that it had been paid and the plaintiff rejoined that even if it had been paid, the Court could not recognize the payment, as it had not been certified under s 258 of the Civil Procedure Code Held that under the circumstances the rent, when paid was to be deemed as paid under the mirasi tenure and not under the decree and, therefore s. 258 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply and payment need not be certified KEDARI v GAJAI

3 ———————Suit against public officer in respect of acts done by him in his official capacity—Notice of suit—Suit for damages against a public officer—Trespass—Misjoinder of causes of action—Amendment of plaint—The plaintiff sued the defendant a public officer to recover damages for two distinct acts (viz wrongful arrest and trespass) alleged to have been illegally and maliciously done by the defendant on two different occasions and claimed one lump sum as damages for both the acts no permission to amend the plaint was asked for in the lower Court On the 21st of October 1895 the plaintiff instituted this suit having on the 18th of September 1895 served the defendant with a notice under s 424 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) Held that the former act (viz the plaintiff s arrest) was an act done by the defendant in his official capacity and was clearly of the kind contemplated by s 424 of the Civil Procedure Code under which two months notice to the defendant would be necessary previous to the institution of the suit and that the suit was rightly dismissed by the lower Court for want of such notice Shahunshah Begum v Fergusson I L R 7 Calc 499 distinguished. Quære—Whether the latter act (viz the trespass into the plaintiff s house) on the allegations in the plaint was an act done by the Magistrate in his official capacity and whether a notice under s. 424 of the Civil Procedure Code would be necessary previous to suing for damages for such an act Held further that as the two acts were mixed up together in the plaint and one lump sum claimed as damages for both and as no permission to amend the plaint was asked for in the lower Court so as to convert the suit into one for damages with reference to the trespass only the plaint ought not to be allowed to be amended on appeal to the High Court JOGENDRA NATH ROY v PRICE I. The shareholders of the company paid nothing upon their shares in cash but had agreed (not in writing filed with the Registrar) that in consideration of certain property conveyed by them to the company at the time of its formation fully paid up shares were to be allotted to them Subsequently the company having gone into liquidation the official liquidator sought to make the shareholders contributories to the assets of the company as the holders of shares upon which nothing had been paid with reference to s. 28 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882) Held that the proceedings for obtaining registration of the company and a grant of a certificate of such registration commenced within the meaning of s 6 of the General Clauses Act when the memorandum and articles of association were received in the Registrar's office in April 1882 while Act X of 1866 was in force that therefore the repeal of that Act by Act VI of 1882 did not affect those proceedings that consequently the company must be taken to have been incorporated under the former Act and that the provisions of s 28 of Act VI of 1882 not being applicable the shareholders were not liable to be placed on the list of contributories as not having paid the full amount of their shares. 5 ———— Registration of association —Companies Act (VI of 1882) s 4—Gain—Mutual Assurance Society—In 1870 a fund was formed by a number of persons over 20 in number the object being according to the prospectus and rules to provide for the widows children and other relatives of the subscribers The management was vested in a board of directors elected by the subscribers from amongst their own number Subscriptions at fixed rates according to tables were paid by the subscribers to secure the provision of pensions for their widows children and relatives The moneys subscribed were invested in Government 4 per cent securities and in the course of management a large reserve fund was accumulated and so invested the interest annually payable in respect of which amounted in the year 1888 to upwards of R46 000 but there was nothing to show that such reserve was larger than sound principles of management required The rules provided for abatements of subscriptions according to a graduated scale which might be granted or withheld from year to year by the directors according to their opinion as to the condition of the fund. A subscriber to the fund was under no obligation to continue his subscription but might stop it at pleasure subject in certain contingencies to forfeiture of the benefit of past payments. Fines were also provided for unpunctuality in payments of subscriptions It was contended that the subscribers formed an association which required registration under s 4 of the Indian Companies Act inasmuch as they carried on business having for its object the acquisition of gain by the association or the individual members thereof as the subscribers must be taken to contemplate the ordinary consequences of their acts and the forfeitures fines and large and increasing reserve fund constituted gain Semble—that these did not constitute gain But held that whether they did or not no business was carried on having for its object the acquisition of gain by the association or the individual members thereof The subscribers to the General Family Pension Fund are not a company association or partnership formed for the purpose of carrying on business that has for its object the acquisition of gain by the company association or partnership or by the individual members thereof within the meaning of s 4 of the Indian Companies Act Where the substantial purpose of an association is not to carry on a business for gain, the fact that gain may accrue incidentally or may arise from merely subsidiary provisions does not make registration necessary KRAAL v WHYMPER

16 ———— Constituting person a member of company—Companies Act X of 1866 s 22—Member of company— Subscriber of the memorandum — Agreement to become a member—Company not in existence—Rescission—Liability for calls —The defendant amongst others subscribed (for 101 shares) a copy of the memorandum and articles of association of the plaintiff company then in process of formation but subsequently and before registration gave notice to the persons most active in the promotion of the said company that he would withdraw his signature and would have no connection thenceforth with the proposed company His withdrawal however was not accepted Subsequently to the receipt of the said notice the memorandum and articles of association so signed by the defendant and others were presented for registration; but registration was refused on the ground that the said documents were not printed. A printed copy of each was then procured and registered. The registered copies differed in respect of the signatures subscribed thereto from the copies signed by the defendant The defendant's name was put upon the register of the company as the holder of 101 shares, but without the defendant's assent or knowledge and two calls were made upon him in respect of the said shares The defendant denied that he was a member of the said company or liable for calls Held that the defendant was not a member of the plaintiff company either (i) as a subscriber of the memorandum of association under the earlier part of s. 22 of the Indian Companies Act inasmuch as the memorandum there referred to was the registered memorandum of which the document signed by the defendant was not even a true copy or (ii) by reason of an agreement to take shares under the latter part of that section inasmuch as the agreement there alluded to was an agreement with the company and the agreement (if any) entered into by the defendant was not and could not have been an agreement with the company the company not being at that time in existence Quære—Whether it is enough to constitute a person a member of a company under

In settling the list of contributories the Court ordered G s name to be placed on the list in respect of the three shares Held that G was not liable as a contributory Though G was a Managing Director of the Company and as such must have known that the shares had been issued as fully paid up shares without complying with s 28 of Act VI of 1882 he was not on that account estopped from taking advantage of the equitable rule which protects a purchaser with notice taking from a purchaser without notice IN RE GULABDAS BHAIDAS I. 25 ———— Contributory—Increase of capital—Illegal issue of shares—Reduction of capital—Companies Act (VI of 1882) s 13.—The Nawab of the Beyla Spinning Weaving and Manufacturing Company Limited was registered under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) The original capital of the company consisted of R4 00 000 divided into 1 600 shares of R250 each. In 1882 the capital of the company was increased by R1 00 000 divided into 1 600 shares of R62 8 The resolution to increase the capital was not passed in accordance with the articles of association i e with the sanction of a special resolution of the company passed at a general meeting On the 5th November 1884 a resolution was passed at a general meeting of the company that the shareholders should take up 4 9 shares of the original capital and 1 027 shares of the increased capital which were then in the hands of the company in the proportion of one share to every two shares already held by them In pursuance of this resolution the appellants took up several shares of the original capital as well as of the new capital On 19th October 1885 a general meeting of the company was held at which it was resolved that the resolution of the 5th November 1884 and all acts done in connection with it should be set aside that the shares taken by the shareholders in pursuance of that resolution should be taken back by the company and such amounts as had been paid by them on those shares should be credited to their names in the company s books This was accordingly done and the shares were transferred to the name of the company In October 1886 the company was wound up by order of the Court In settling the list of contributories the District Judge of Surat held that the appellants were liable as contributories in respect of all the shares which they had taken up in pursuance of the resolution of 5th November 1884 On appeal from this decision —Held that with respect to the shares of the original capital the resolution of the 19th October 1885 was illegal and invalid. It operated not as an investment by the company of its funds in its own shares but as an extinguishment of the shares and such extinguishment was virtually a reduction of the capital which could not be done without complying with the provisions of s 13 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 188) The holders of such shares were therefore properly placed on the list of contributories Held also that the issue of the shares of the new capital was illegal as the resolution to increase the capital had not been come to in accordance with the articles of association It was therefore open to the Company to set aside the resolution of 5th November 1884 When it was set aside the persons who held the new shares ceased to be shareholders and could not therefore be held liable as contributories. There is nothing in ss 126 and 144 requiring the Official Liquidator to place on the list all the persons who may as representatives be liable to contribute in discharge of the liability of a deceased shareholder as contemplated by s. 126 Nor can the liability under that section of a person who has been placed on the list as his representative be affected by omission of the Official Liquidator to do so. A shareholder holding 423 shares became insolvent and his shares thereupon vested in the Official Assignee who sold them. The purchaser required the Official Assignee to transfer the shares into the names of two nominees, viz 200 shares to the name of one nominee and 223 shares to the name of the other The Official Assignee executed the necessary transfer deeds and sent them to the company with a request that the shares might be transferred accordingly The proposed nominees were already members of the company and registered holders of shares in it and no objection was taken to them in their personal capacity The Directors however declined to approve of the transferees and to register the transfer unless the transferees would pledge themselves not to approve a certain change in the mode of remunerating the agents of the company which the Directors desired to effect and which they believed would be very advantageous to the company The transferees refused to pledge themselves in any way as to their future action and brought this suit to enforce registration of the transfer Held following Moffatt v Farquhar L R., 7 Ch D., 591 that the Directors were bound to register the transfers. It was contended that neither the Official Assignee nor the transferees had any legal right to call on the company to register the transfers Held that, having regard to the provision of the Articles of Association of the company the Official Assignee was entitled to have the shares registered in the names of his vendees. 43 ———— Liability of directors for negligence in management—Employment of agent by directors—Acquiescence of shareholders—Liability of estate of deceased director—Banker Who is a—The plaintiffs company went into liquidation early in the year 1879 in consequence of losses sustained by the failure of Nursey Kessowji & Co which firm had been the bankers of the said company The said firm had stopped payment on the 26th December 1878 having then in its hands the sum of R8 80 250 11 1 belonging to the company In this suit the official liquidators of the company sought to recover that sum from the defendants who had been directors of the company and a further sum of R2 48 670 14 0 as damages sustained by the company through the fraud and gross negligence of the defendants in permitting Nursey Kessowji the agent of the company to deal with certain shares for his own purposes The first four defendants were the directors of the company the fifth defendant was the assignee of the estate of Nursey Kessowji whose firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co had become insolvent The plaintiffs company was registered on the 31st July 1878 and by the memorandum and articles of association the said Nursey Kessowji was appointed secretary treasurer and agent of the company for a period of twenty five years upon the terms and conditions contained in an agreement annexed to the articles of association whereby it was (inter alia) provided that Nursey Kessowji should deposit with such banker or bankers as the directors for the time being should appoint all the moneys due from him to the said company and exceeding in amount at any one time the sum of R5 000 On the 6th August 1878 the directors of the company appointed the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co to be the bankers of the company It was further alleged by the plaintiff that immediately after the registration of the company the directors and Nursey Kessowji began to borrow money upon the credit of the company far in excess of the legitimate wants of the company and to pay over the money so borrowed to the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co to be used by that firm in speculative business that the said loans were obtained by the directors not bonâ fide for the purposes of the company but for the purposes of supplying funds to the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co to enable it to carry on its business At the end of the year 1878 the sum paid over by the directors to the firm of Nursey Kessowji had by reason of such borrowing amounted to the sum of R8 80,2 0 The plaintiffs alleged that the said loans were wholly unnecessary; and they charged the directors with gross negligence in raising the said loans or permitting them to be raised and in permitting the moneys so borrowed to remain in the hands of the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co to be applied by that firm to its own purposes As to the R 48 670 14-0 the plaintiffs alleged that certain unallotted shares of the total value of R3 93 750 had been left in the hands of the directors to be disposed of the proceeds of which were to be applied in making certain payments due by the company that instead of applying these shares to such purposes the directors had filled up the said shares in the name of Nursey Kessowji and authorized him to mortgage the same in order to raise funds that the said Nursey Kessowji had accordingly dealt with the said shares and had applied the proceeds thereof to his own purposes The plaintiffs charged the directors with fraud and gross negligence as to these shares and claimed to recover R2 48 670-14-0 in respect thereof from the defendants. The defendants alleged that they had acted bonâ fide in all matters connected with the company that they had always believed the firm of Nursey Kessowji & Co to be in a solvent condition and had no reason to mistrust its management of the affairs of the company One of the defendants (No 3) died after the institution of the suit and his sons were made parties His representatives and Kessowji Naik (defendant No. 1) also claimed to set off against the plaintiffs claim certain payments made by them as guarantors for the company Held (1) that one of the directors knew as a fact that the agent was not in a solvent condition; and that the other directors in the circumstances of the case ought to have ascertained his financial condition (2) Directors are responsible for the management of their company where by the articles of association the business is to be conducted by the board with the assistance of an agent They cannot divest themselves of their responsibility by delegating the whole management to the agent and abstaining from all enquiry If he proves unfaithful under such circumstances the liability is theirs just as much as if they themselves had been unfaithful (3) That the directors had not used fair and reasonable diligence in the management of the company's affairs and were liable to refund the money entrusted by them to the agent Nursey Kessowji without proper knowledge as to whether it was needed, and without any subsequent investigation of a serious character with respect to its disposal Such conduct

52 ———— Power of directors as such to draw bills of exchange—Companies' Act (X of 1866) s 47—Winding up—Interest on debts subsequently to date of order to wind up—Rules of Bombay High Court of 3rd August 1866—Rule No 24—The articles of association of the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company Limited authorized the directors to raise or borrow from time to time in the name or otherwise on behalf of the company such sums of money as they from time to time think expedient either by way of sale or mortgage of the whole or any part of the property of the company or by bonds debentures or promissory notes or in such other manner as they deem best and for the purpose of securing the repayment of any money so borrowed with interests to make and carry into effect any arrangement which they may deem expedient by conveying or assigning any property of the company to trustees or otherwise Held that though power to borrow money on bills of exchange was not specifically given yet bills of exchange being in many respects analogous to promissory notes and promissory notes having been specifically mentioned in the article the power to raise money by an equally well known and recognized mode —by drawing endorsing or accepting bills of exchange —must be deemed to be included in the general words or in such other manner as they deem best. Three of the directors of the above company one of whom was also the secretary treasurer and agent of the company drew a bill in favour of S in the following form Sixty days after the date of this first of exchange (second and third of the same tenor and date not being paid) pay to the order of S the sum of rupees two lakhs only value received and place to account of G P K V N K secretary treasurer and agent The New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company Limited directors. The bill was endorsed by S to the bank of Bombay was duly presented for payment to the drawee and protested for non payment. Subsequently to the date of the drawing of the bill the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company Limited, went into liquidation The Bank of Bombay claimed as endorsees of the bill to prove against the company as drawers Held that assuming that companies under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) are by s. 47 liable on bills of exchange drawn on their behalf or on account of persons acting under their authority the bill in question was not such a bill Whether or not a note or bill must on the face of it, express that it is made accepted or endorsed "by or on behalf or on account of the company yet there must be on the face of it that which shows that it was so made accepted or endorsed and which excludes the inference that it was made accepted or endorsed by or on behalf or on account of any other person. A bill or note may be in a certain sense on behalf of or on account of a company though there is upon its face no reference to the company even in the form of a description of the persons who actually make accept or endorse as being directors or secretary As between such persons and the company such a bill or note may well be on behalf of or on account of the company but it is not therefore so between the company and third parties So far as third parties are concerned a company under the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) can be made liable on a bill or note only when such bill or note on the face of it expresses that it was made accepted or endorsed by or on behalf or on account of the company or where that fact appears by necessary inference from what the face of the instrument itself shows. The addition to the signatures of individuals as makers drawers acceptors or endorsers of notes or bills of their description as director or directors secretary treasurer and agent of a certain company is not considered to raise such inference as it does not exclude the supposition that though described as directors, etc they intended to make themselves personally liable to holders of the instrument though as between themselves and the company they may be entitled to be indemnified for anything they may have paid on account of the company in respect of such notes or bills Dutton v Marsh L R 6 Q B 361 followed. 76 ———— Notice of proceeding—Service of notices and orders—Suit against contributories—Contributory in India to English company—Last known address or place of abode—Rule 63 of the rules of 1862 of the High Court Bombay—The London Bombay and Mediterranean Bank a joint stock company registered under the English Companies Act 186 was ordered to be wound up by an order of the Court of Chancery in England in 1866 and by a subsequent order of the said Court made in the winding up of the bank it was ordered that service of any notice summons order or other proceedings in these matters might be effected by putting such notice etc. into any post office either in England or at Bombay duly addressed to such contributories being past members according to their respective last known addresses or places of abode By a final balance order dated 5th June 1879 it was ordered by the Court of Chancery in England that the persons named in the schedule to the said order being contributories as past members of the said bank should within four days after the service of the said order pay the amount set opposite to their names with interest from the 15th March 1879 The defendant's name appeared in the said schedule and the present suit was brought to recover the sum therein appearing as due from him to the bank viz R3 900 The defendant denied that he had ever held shares in the plaintiffs' bank or that he ever had notice of any of the proceedings in the winding up At the trial it appeared that all the various orders and notices to shareholders made in the winding up of the bank prior to the balance order of the 5th June 1879 had been sent by post to the defendant addressed to him at No 36 Fanasvadi and were all returned undelivered. It was proved that he had never resided there but that his brother had a place of business there and that the defendant used occasionally to go there for the purpose of attending to his brother's business It further appeared that the residence of the defendant as given in the register of shareholders was Loharchall and not 36 Fanasvadi Held that the notices orders etc prior to the order of 5th June 1879 were not so served as to make the defendant subject to that final order that the obligation to obey the command of the Court of Chancery contained therein had not arisen as against the defendant and that consequently the present suit must fail It is a leading principle of English law always understood except when expressly excluded that a person proceeded against in a Court must have due notice of the proceeding failing such notice he is entitled to protection if the judgment or order obtained in his absence is made the ground of a suit in any Court governed by English principles The Court of Chancery in England had not in this case so called the defendant before it as to enable it in his absence to pronounce a definitive order against him or to bind him in the Court of his domicile although he was included in the order of the Court of Chancery The fact that the defendant frequently attended his brother's place of business at No 36 Fanasvadi was not sufficient to make that place his last known address If there had been evidence that he had used No 36 Fanasvadi as an address for receiving letters that might probably have been sufficient It would then have been known as his address at least as an address The address or residence of a member of a company entered in the register of shareholders although sufficiently ascertained for the purpose of communication from the company is not therefore ascertained for a service of legal proceedings For the purpose of such service care must be taken to find out the last known place of abode of the alleged contributory and to effect the substituted service there LONDON BOMBAY AND MEDITERRANEAN BANK v GOVIND RAMCHANDRA

Companies Act, 1862 and the winding up order was made by the Court of Chancery in England on the 20th July 1866 By a subsequent order made on the winding up it was ordered by the said Court that service of notices etc of the various proceedings might be effected on contributories being past members by posting the same either in England or in Bombay duly addressed to the last known address or place of abode of such contributories The Court of Chancery on the 16th December 1878 made an order for a call of £10 per share upon the contributories and on the 5th June 1879 the final balance order was made by the Court. This suit was brought to recover the sum of R754-7 0 alleged to be due by the defendant as a contributory in the B list under the said balance order The plaintiff was an assignee of the bank The defendant who resided at Sumari in the Surat District denied that he was a shareholder in the bank and alleged that he had had no notice of the various proceedings in the winding up At the hearing it was proved that one of the notices which had been posted in Bombay addressed to the defendant at Sumari in the Surat District viz a notice of the intended application for a call of £10 per share dated the 27th August 1878 had been returned undelivered to the Dead Letter Office having been carelessly addressed. No further steps were taken to serve it on the defendant Held that the defendant not having received any summons or notice to attend the hearing of the application for a call of £10 per share was not liable to the call made in his absence Courts in British India when called upon to give effect to a foreign judgment should insist upon a strict proof of the validity and service of summonses and other processes alleged to have emanated from a foreign Court and made a foundation for a liability to be enforced here by Courts that have no cognizance of the case on its merits Rousillon v Rousillon L R 14 Ch D 351 and 371 followed. No notice to the objector to produce the original letter appeared on the record; but at the hearing of the appeal it was alleged by the official liquidator and denied by the objector that such notice had been in fact given There was no evidence as to the posting of the original letter or of the address which it bore but the press copy was contained in the press-copy letter book of the company and was proved to be in the handwriting of a deceased secretary of the company whose duty it was to despatch letters after they had been copied in the letter book. The objector denied having received the letter or any notice of allotment Held that the Court should not draw the inference that the original letter was properly addressed or posted that the press-copy letter was inadmissible in evidence and that there was no proof of the communication of any notice of allotment. The evidence adduced by the official liquidator to show that the defendant was a member of the company and so liable as a contributory consisted of the register of members a letter written by the objector, a reply thereto written by a managing director of the company and the oral testimony of the director himself The objector adduced no evidence at all Held that the official liquidator might if he had chosen to do so have put the register in evidence and waited before giving any further evidence until the objector had given some to displace the primâ facie evidence afforded by the register or to impugn the character of the register but his case must be looked at as a whole and having taken the line which he did he must take the consequences of his other evidence contradicting or impugning the primâ facie evidence of the register and notwithstanding that the objector gave no evidence the register was not conclusive RAM DAS CHAKARBATI v OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR OF COTTON GINNING COMPANY

81. ——— Transfer of assets to new company—Companies Act (X of 1866) ss 149 154 and 175—Right of creditors of transferring company—Dissentient shareholders—Sanction of Court—By special resolutions passed on the 3rd July 1878 and confirmed on 31st July 1878 the shareholders of the Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company (Limited) resolved that the company should be wound up voluntarily and that all the assets of the said company should be transferred by the liquidators to a new company then intended shortly to be formed and registered in Bombay called the New Fleming Spinning and Weaving Company Limited and that the liquidators should receive as the consideration for such transfer certain fully paid up shares in the new company for distribution among the shareholders of the old company The said transfer was to be made subject to a covenant on the part of the new company to perform all the agreements and to discharge all the debts and liabilities of the old company The new company was duly formed and registered on the same day (31st July 1878) and the specified number of shares was delivered to the liquidators of the old company for distribution among the shareholders of the old company Two of the said shareholders J and H the holders of 50 and 20 shares respectively dissented from the special resolutions in the manner provided by s 175 of the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) and required the liquidators to purchase their interests. The matter was thereupon referred to arbitration In the case of H an award was made and filed but further proceedings were stayed by order of Court In the case of J no award was made and he brought a suit which was still pending against both the old and new companies and the liquidators to recover R75 000 the alleged value of his shares In pursuance of the resolution the liquidators of the old company handed over the assets to the new company but no formal grant or assignment in writing of the said assets was executed. They remained in its possession until the 17th January 1879 on which day the said new company was ordered to be wound up by the Court The petitioners were appointed official liquidators and as such were in possession of the assets at the date of the petition No property whatever remained in the hands of the old company except the shares remaining to be distributed among the dissentient shareholders The new company had discharged debts of the old company to the amount of six lakhs of rupees and there remained debts of over three lakhs due by the old company Until after the new company had become insolvent no creditor of the old company had expressed his dissent from the above special resolution or had refused to accept the new company as his debtor On 1st March 1879 the voluntary winding up of the old company was directed to be continued as a winding up under the supervision of the Court. The official liquidators of the new company now presented a petition praying that the above special resolutions might be sanctioned by the Court. Certain unsatisfied creditors of the old company opposed the petition insisting that the sanction should be refused except upon the condition that they should be paid in full out of the property of the old company The two dissentient shareholders J and H also objected to the sanction being given unless provisions were made for the satisfaction of their claims as soon as they should be ascertained Held that under the special circumstances of the case the sanction of the Court should be given to the resolutions but subject to the value of the interest of the two dissenting shareholders being paid or adequately secured Such order to be without prejudice to any question between the creditors of the old company and the dissenting shareholders IN RE FLEMING SPINNING AND WEAVING COMPANY [I. 94. ——— Claims on assets—Precedence of judgment-debt due to Secretary of State—Stay of execution of judgment-debt—A judgment debt due to the Crown is in Bombay entitled to the same precedence in execution as a like judgment-debt in England, if there be no special legislative provision affecting that right in the particular case. Under similar circumstances a judgment-debt due to the Secretary of State in Council for India is in Bombay entitled to the like precedence and the reason is that such debt is vested in the Crown and when realized falls into the State treasury The nature of the cause of action in respect of which the judgment was recovered does not affect the right of the Crown or of the Secretary of State in Council for India to priority As the Crown is not either expressly or by implication bound by the Indian Companies Act (X of 1866) and as an order made under that Act for the winding-up of a company does not work any alteration of property such an order does not enable the Court to stay the execution of a judgment-debt due to the Crown or to the Secretary of State in Council for India. 24 ———— Report of police officer—Criminal Procedure Code (Act XXV of 1861) s 68—Act X of 1872 s 142—Knowledge—Report of police—Interference of High Court—S 68 of the Criminal Procedure Code applies only to cases in which the private individual injured or aggrieved does not come forward to make a formal complaint. That section is intended for the purpose of enabling a Magistrate to take care that justice may be vindicated notwithstanding that the persons individually aggrieved are unwilling or unable to prosecute and even in such cases the jurisdiction to arrest requires for its foundation knowledge of the fact of an offence having been committed and that knowledge must be either personal or derived from testimony legally given. The report of the police or any statement which falls short of an actual formal complaint or of a statement made on oath is not sufficient in law to give a Magistrate jurisdiction to issue his warrant. In this case although the Magistrate had acted illegally before evidence was recorded and had shown a want of discretion in some of the stages the High Court refused to quash the Magistrate's order directing the prisoners to be put upon their defence on the ground that the order had been made by a competent officer after hearing evidence which was judicially received and recorded. COMPOUNDING OFFENCE—continued

16 ———— Requisites for composition of offence valid in law—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) s 345—Onus of proof—Wrongful restraint and confinement of coolies employed on tea garden—Where an accused person alleges that an offence with which he is charged has been compounded so as to take away the jurisdiction of the Criminal Courts to try it the onus is on him to show that there was a composition valid in law M, a European British subject charged with the compoundable offences of wrongful restraint and wrongful confinement of coolies employed on a tea garden of which he was the manager pleaded that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to try the cases as they had been compounded by the complainants The alleged compromise consisted of a Bengali paper signed by the coolies stating that they made razinama (compromise) of the case of their own accord' and a paper in English signed by M these papers being given to the District Superintendent of Police who had investigated the complaints and who stated that he asked the coolies as to the contents of the Bengali paper and they said that they had signed it voluntarily and stated its purport and that one of them said in the presence of the others that it was a razinama G one of the coolies also wrote on the paper the words in Uriya I will not carry on the case The Bengali paper was written by the Darogah of the police station in presence of M The paper signed by M was as follows —' I hereby agree with these Ganjam people that there shall be no legal proceedings of any kind taken against them with the exception of those who have not completed their agreements Those whose agreements have not been completed proceedings will be taken against them on 22nd May if they have not returned to the garden before then ' Neither of the papers were explained to G so as to make them intelligible to him for though the Bengali paper was read out G did not understand that language G was one of the coolies who had completed his agreement with M Held per PRINSEP J—The compounding of an offence signifies that the person against whom the offence has been committed has received some gratification to act as an inducement for his desiring to abstain from a prosecution; here there was no forbearance on the part of M to proceed against G who had served out the term of his engagement and therefore there was no consideration for the agreement to compound Having regard moreover to the ignorance and inferior intelligence of G it was of vital importance for M to show what led to the alleged agreement and how it was that the Darogah was instrumental to it which he had not done Per TREVELYAN J—Compounding an offence supposes an arrangement by which the parties have settled their differences and in the more usual acceptation of the term implies that the prosecutor has received some consideration or gratification for dropping the prosecution Although the provisions of the Contract Act may not apply the proof of the arrangement must be similar to that which the Court requires for the proof of any agreement which is in issue and unless it appears that the parties were free from influence of every kind and were fully aware of their respective rights it would be impossible to give effect to a so called arrangement or composition Having regard to the fact that the writer of the Bengali agreement had not been called and that the contracting parties were on the one side ignorant coolies strangers to the land and to the language in which the document was written and on the other a European of some education, assisted by his Bengali clerk and having also the assistance of the police it was not proved that G knew what he was about and was fairly contracting Held therefore by the Court that there was under the circumstances no compounding of the offences with which M was charged valid in law such as to deprive the Magistrate of jurisdiction to try them.
